WILMINGTON, N. C.

SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 15 1883.

Entered at the Postoffice at Wilmington, N. C., as second-class matter.

NOT MUCH!

We have heard of hopeful men and we have heard of men whom we considered over sanguine in their hopes and expectations, but the following is the hardest case of the kind of which we have ever had any knowledge. In speaking of the nomination of Gov. Butler to the same office again, and the rumors that many Western Democrats were anxious to secure his defeat for that nomination so as to remove him from the Presidential field, a leading supporter of Butler says they are absurd:

"Butler will be in the field for the Presidential nomination," he said, "but the favor of the West is of comparatively little account compared with that of the South. It might seem a strange prediction, but I will venture to say that Governor Butler, in the event of his re-election, would go into the next National Convention with the support of a solid South and a solid New England."

In the days of reconstruction it was Butler who made use of the quotation, in speaking of the right of Southerners, that, "They must bring forth fruits meet for repentance," before they can be received as friends of the country, and it became an axiom in the mouth of every aspiring politician and a theme for discussion by every Republican editor throughout the country; but we do not imagine that Butler, when he uttered the sentiment, imagined that we would ever become so contritely penitent and would so abase ourselves in the "sackcloth and ashes" of humiliation as to ever become "solid" for him for any office—much less for the Presidency. We presume that he has many warm personal and political friends, but our information leads us to think that they are not plentiful in this section. The idea that a solid delegation for Ben Butler could be found in the South would be a gross insult to our people were it not for its ludicrousness. As it is we hardly know whether to pity the man who made the foregoing assertion for his folly, or laugh at him for his stupendous egotism.

We have no idea that a delegation could be found in the South who would have the temerity to dare to cast their votes for Ben Butler as the nominee of the Democratic party for the Presidency, but should such a phenomenon occur, we are very sure they would not dare return to their wives, daughters, sisters and mothers again, not, at least, while broomsticks, shovels, tongs, firesticks and dishwater were obtainable. Whenever a Southern man casts his vote for Ben Butler, the quicker he packs his grip sack and leaves for parts unknown the better it will be for his personal safety. Men might not trouble themselves to annoy him, but every true woman of the South would rise in her wrath and insulted dignity to make the country too hot to hold him.

Gov. Hendricks, although a Presidential aspirant, is not without the strength of convictions. He finds words to express himself. On Tuesday he delivered a campaign speech in Iowa, where the principal issues are the tariff and prohibition. In regard to the former he quoted the tariff resolutions adopted by the Democratic conventions in Iowa, Ohio and Indiana, and said: "The Democracy of Virginia is in harmony with the States so largely interested in agriculture. Iowa cannot, under any pressure of party politics, consent that the duties on imports shall be permanently so adjusted and imposed as to bear unequally and unjustly upon her great interests. In her resolution Iowa does not demand that modifications shall be rudely and roughly enacted so as to disturb or destroy useful investments already made and important enterprises already undertaken, but that protective duties shall be placed in the line of gradual and persistent reduction. The purpose and object of any tax, whether upon imported or domestic productions, should be to raise needed revenue. But in either case the sagacious legislator will carefully consider the effect of his action and policy upon the important interests of the country. In the adjustment of the tariff it becomes a question of infinite detail what shall be the rate upon each article taxed, and, in the sentiment of the Ohio and Indiana resolutions, inequalities of burdens add monopolies should be prevented, and care taken that the industries of the country and the interests of labor suffer no harm. During the period since the close of the war, now eighteen years, the Republican party has held every department of the government in its control, save only the House of Representatives for a brief period. Has it sought the common welfare in tariff reform, in reduction of revenues, and in economy of public expenditures? You will not, you cannot, claim that in these material respects it has taken care that the people suffered no harm. It has fallen far short of the measure of its responsibility. Can you then demand of this great agricultural State its confidence and support upon assurances that your leaders will in good faith work out the essential reforms which they neglected in the past?"

From these remarks, says the News and Observer, it seems that Gov. Hendricks does not underestimate the difficulties attendant on a wise tariff reduction. It is a question of infinite detail to fix the proper rate upon each article proposed to be taxed, but then the wide difference between the two parties is that the Democrats propose to make a great and heavy reduction in the rate, while the Republicans propose to let the rates stand as they are.

PERSONAL.

Queen Victoria, has strawberries all the year round.

Gov. Pattison, of Pennsylvania, is in Asbury Park with his family.

Prof. Wm. A. Stevens, of the Rochester Theological Seminary, has arrived home after a ten months' journey in Egypt and Palestine.

Mme. Carla Serena, the explorer and writer, has been made an honorary corresponding member of the Geographical Society of Marseilles. She is the first woman ever thus distinguished.

Miss Marion Cutler, the adopted daughter of Commodore Cutler, United States Navy, and so well known in Washington society, while travelling abroad with him recently met an English nobleman, who, falling desperately in love, proposed and was accepted, and in a short time married to Miss Cutler.

A few months ago Judge Black said to one of his friends: "When I am gone, I want you to be able to say of me as was said of Samuel when he left the judgeship, the record of which runs thus: 'Whose ox have I taken? or whose ass have I taken? or whom have I defrauded? or of whose hand have I received any bribe to blind mine eyes therewith? and I will restore it to you. And they said, thou has not defrauded us, nor oppressed us, neither hast thou taken aught of any man's hand.'"

Miss Louise Van Allen, the American lady killed by injuries received at Casamicola, was a resident of San Francisco. She had both legs broken below the knees, and one foot nearly cut off. The very weak condition in which she was found prevented amputation, and, after nearly ten days of terrible suffering, she expired on the 7th inst. Her body is being embalmed to be sent home for burial by the side of her mother, in the old family burying-ground at Bergen. She was the only child.

Catarrh of the Bladder.

Stinging irritation, inflammation, all Kidney and Urinary Complaints, cured by "Buchu-paiba." $1.

RELIGIOUS INTELLIGENCE.

One hundred Methodists were immersed in Illinois.

South Carolina is the strongest Presbyterian State in the South.

The First Baptist Church, of Sing Sing will be 100 years old in 1890.

Congregationalism has flourished in Australia for half a century.

The Congregational Church of Connecticut has 297 meeting houses and 54,663 members.

The Roman Catholic bishop of Michigan has prohibited the raising of money by fairs, excursions, etc.

Christ Church, Philadelphia, was established in 1697, and has just published its history. Queen Anne once gave it a communion service.

Mr. James Robert, recently a Roman Catholic, is conducting Baptist services among the French-Canadian quarrymen in West Quincy, Mass.

Rev. Dr. George W. Brown is now rector of the Reformed Episcopal Church of the Atonement, Brooklyn. He recently left the regular church.

The Protestant Episcopal Church of Connecticut has 157 clergymen, 146 parishes, 20 chapels and missions, 14,445 families, 21,044 communicants (1,040 confirmed during the past year) and 15,206 Sunday-school pupils.

The new Congregational church in Great Barrington, Mass., is said to be the finest ecclesiastical building in that State. Its renovation, after the fire, cost $28,670, the organ (a gift) $30,000, the parsonage $32,000 and its barn $12,000; total, aside from furniture, heating, etc., $102,670.

Rev. Abner Warren, who became a foreign missionary in 1832, returned disabled in 1836, and is now nearly 80 years old, says: "I have never seen a moment since coming home when, if circumstances would allow it, I would not be glad to return. I wish my children were all useful missionaries. I have yet to meet the first returned missionary whose love for the service was not deep and true, and who did not give up his cherished work with the deepest grief. My own last twelve years have brought me into yet deeper sympathy with them. I verily believe that not a few of them, if allowed the choice by kind heaven, would prefer death on the field before a return home with blood and marrow and bones filled with malarial poison. No class of men amongst us are so liable to be misunderstood."

Another Life Saved.

Mrs. Harriet Cummings, of Cincinnati, Ohio, writes:

Early last winter my daughter was attacked with a severe cold which settled on her lungs. We tried several medicines, none of which seemed to do her any good, but she continued to get worse, and finally raised large amounts of blood from her lungs. We called in a family physician, but he failed to do her any good. We then called in a physician—a most skillful professor in one of our colleges—he said that she could not get well. At this time a friend who had been cured by Dr. Wm. Hall's Balsam for the Lungs, advised me to give it a trial. We then got a bottle and before she had used it all up she began to improve, and by the use of three bottles was entirely cured.

SHORTS.

It is said that the two unfinished tunnels on the Northern Pacific road will cost $10,000,000. It will take more golden spikes to foot this bill.

In the effort to suppress the smoke nuisance at Chicago the Northwestern Railroad was fined $250 on the evidence that five of its switching engines were seen emitting dense clouds of smoke. The crusade of the city officials is particularly directed against the railway companies and the owners of the river tug.

California furnishes a case of the quickest courtship probably on record. A wealthy widow of San Francisco, and a well-known hotel keeper of Oakland, met for the first time a few days ago, and in exactly fifteen minutes after the meeting they were engaged to be married. The marriage was solemnized the next day, to the unbounded surprise of their friends.

The "thirty millions, mostly fools," are growing excited over the beauty competition in England, and are paying in their money for the privilege to vote. The idea, the London Globe says, "was taken from our New York fairs. There never was more ridiculous rivalry, but Trinco's comment on the Englishman's faculty for interesting himself in absurdities holds as good to-day as when the supreme Saxon said it. By last accounts Mrs. Langtry was again in front, with 233 votes. The American star, as she styled Miss Lillian Russell, who recently came into the running, makes rather a forlorn figure, footing up on 14 votes.

MOONSHINE.

"I brought my aunt into the city to-day to show 'er round," said a rustic to a Boston police officer, "and she's got kind tired walkin', so I want to find some place where she kin sit down an' rest a bit and have a bite of suthin to eat. Kin yer direct me to any place?" "Certainly," responded the representative of Boston's aesthetic and literary police force. "What you want is a rest you want. Go right into that eating saloon." The pair went in.

Heiress (as they swim toward the shore): "Oh, dear! to think of my beautiful banjo being lost? I could almost cry." Mr. Archibald Turner: "Yes, but we've got the canoe, and that's worth a good deal more just at present. There's another great advantage the canoe has over the banjo, the less you know about it the—the more you can get out of it."

A horse belonging to a colored man, and attached to an ash-wagon, was standing at the corner of Woodward avenue and John R. street, yesterday, when he suddenly lurched forward and fell over. A crowd collected, and the owner came hurrying up. Various opinions were expressed as to what ailed the equine, and the owner finally appealed to a citizen to tell him what he thought. "Why, it seems to be a plain case of polio-eye, pink-eye, string-halt, glanders, botts and the epizootic," was the reply. "Thanks. Dat takes a powerful burden off de ole man's mind. Do ye know dat when I fust cum' runnin' up an' saw de ole boss lyin' dar' wid his eyes closed an' his legs all twisted up, I made up my mind dat 'sumthin' sorter serious had cotched on. I'll walk him home an' gin him a leetle saleratus water to brace him up. Glad he was heah, sah, 'cause I'd have been worried!"—Free Press.

"I wouldn't be without Dr. Benson's Celery and Chamomile pills if they cost $1 a pill. They cured me of neuralgia, of 9 years standing." Joseph Snyder, Paxinos, Pa. 50 cts. per box, at druggists.

WINSTON, FORSYTH CO., N. C. GENTS—I desire to express to you my thanks for your wonderful Hop Bitters. I was troubled with dyspepsia for five years previous to commencing the use of your Hop Bitters some six months ago. My cure has been wonderful. I am pastor of the First Methodist Church of this place, and my whole congregation can testify to the great virtues of your bitters.

Very respectfully,
REV. H. FEREBEE.

The Poor Little Book-keeper.

Though he was the father of a large family, he was a small and narrow-chested man, with weak lungs, a disordered liver, and a dyspeptic stomach. For many years he had been a book-keeper in one of the principal banks. So conscientious was he that, although he had many opportunities to take holidays, he had not been absent from his desk for eleven years. He attended faithfully to duty, and thought that to spend a day in recreation would be a sinful waste of time. Despite constantly increasing weakness he stuck to his post, when he ought to have been at home, resting and gaining strength. He grew weaker and weaker, until at last he had to stay away from his work altogether, and give up his position. He is dead.

Had this poor little book-keeper used Brown's Iron Bitters, he might have kept his position longer, and possibly have saved his life. His case was one of dreadful debility; the debility which undermines the foundations of health and life; the debility which goes hand in hand with disease, and which leads down to death and the grave. He was poorly nourished; in fact hardly nourished at all. His digestive machinery was so disordered that the food he ate did not assimilate and form good blood. What blood he had was poor and thin. There was nothing vigorous about him. Now this was perhaps an extreme case; but there are many debilitated people going down, down, down, just as this poor little book-keeper went.

Weak and forlorn as these unhappy people are, they can be saved. Many of them can be restored to health and vigor. Brown's Iron Bitters will carry to their enfeebled organs the strength that is needed. Its peculiar preparation of iron will give color and nourishment to the blood, and so vitalize the system. Thus digestion has a chance. The liver is restored to proper action. The lungs take healthy inspirations of air. The kidneys begin to work right. That horrible old feeling of lassitude departs, and misery moves off. Every debilitated sufferer ought to know about Brown's Iron Bitters.
