WAITING FOR MOTHER.

The old man sits in his easy chair. Slumbering the moments away, Dreaming a dream that is all his own, On this gladsome, peaceful day; His children have gathered from far and near.

His children's children besides-And merry voices are echoing through The "Homestead's" hall so wide.

But far away in the years long flown Grandfather lives again; And his heart forgets that he ever knew A shadow of grief and pain: For he sees his wife as he saw her then-

A matron comely and fair. With her children gathered round his board, And never a vacant chair.

Oh! happy this dream of the "Auld Laug Sync." Of the years long slipped away!

Taking too Much for Granted.

By invitation I made a speech not long ago at a farmer's barbecue in a naboring county, and I spread myself in the encouraging our people to keep up with the progress of the age, and I pictured the innocence and honesty and independence of a farmer's life in multitudinous language. I was cheered and congratulated of course when I got through, but an old grizzily feller with brass-bound spectacles came up and says he to me: "My friend, you talk mighty well; you talk like a lawyer; but I would like to know if you can tell what kind of calf would make the best milch cow." "A heifer calf," said I, and the crowd just yelled. I got the grin on the old man, and so says I. "Now let me ask you a question, and you may ask me another, and the man who can't answer his own question must treat to cigars." "All right," said he, "now go ahead."

Said I: "How does a ground squirrel dig his hole without leaving any dirt found the top?" He studied awhile and gave it up, and called on me to answer. "Why," said I, "he begins at the bottom." "Well, but how does he get to the bottom?" said the old man, as though he had me.

"I don't kuow," said I; "I never did know; and as it is your question you must answer it or pay."
The crowd yelled again, and the old man surrendered and bought the cigars. Well, there are a heap of things that way about farming; we take too much for granted. The ground squirrel does leave dirt around the top. For years we have been shelling off the butts and grains to plant, and now it seems to be settled by many experiments that the top grains are the best. For years we have been harrowing in our seed wheat, and now it seems that it ought to be rolled in and the surface packed hard and close. We live but to learn, and he lives best who learns most.-Bill
