John Bright in a recent speech to his constituents, remarked that he could "not conceal from them his- conviction that the business of the country is quite as well conducted during the six months of the year when Parliament is not in session as during the six months when it is in session." This applies with equal truth to the vacations of Congress.

Since the days of the Stuarts the in crease of wealth in England has been more rapid than the increase of population. In 1860 the wealth of England and Wales was equal to £45 per head; in 1872 it was $127, and last year since the accession of Queen Victoria. Since 1840 wealth has increased four times more rapidly than population. which led Prof. Leyi to remark that they disproyed the Malthusian theory. so far as England was concerned.

The number of foreigners now living France is 1,001,090, or 2.68 per cent. of the population. For the past thirty years this percentage has been increasing. In 1851 it was only 1.06; in 1861 it was 1.33, and in 1872 it was, 2.03, from which point there has since been the increase to 2.68. Of all foreigners it is found that Italians and Belgians are the most numerous, the former amounting to nearly 250,000 and the latter to over 432 000. Next in order come the Germans, and the Spaniards, Swiss and English, the last numbering 37,000. During the past five years the Italians alone have increased 75,000 ..

The King of Siam, whose ambassadors are soon expected to arrive in Paris, is said to be a most extraordinary look ing little man. Korl I. is about twenty years of age, and the most remarkable fact concerning him is the inordinate length of his nails, each of which measares about half a yard. The deformity is considered by the Siamese as an attribute of sovereignty, and, of course. reduces the monarch to a state of absolute helplessness. He can do nothing for himself, and is obliged to have recourse in every instance to his aide-decamp.

With a million to begin with, any, body might soon get as wealthly as Vanderbilt. So says a correspondent. He describes a building in New York: It is a lot 25 feet wide by 100 deep. An alleyway of 5 feet runs down one side, and on this the tenements face. The whole house, consequently, is 20 feet wide and 100 deep. It is five stories high, and is divided into five sections or houses, each 20 feet square. The apartments for a family consist of a living room, 13 feet square, a dark 5x10 bedroom in the rear, and two closets barely large enough to contain two cots for children. There is only one window, and it looks out upon the narrow, filthy alley so that light and ventilation are both scant. There is no water in these houses, the tenants lowering buckets from the windows by ropes, and filling them at a hydrant which is surrounded by foul pools. A drain is choked with rotten vegetables and other refuse. But the uncleanliness is not essential to the success of the the writer's proposed enterprise. What he wishes to call particular attention to is the smallthe homes and the of ness relative largeness the of rentals. The prices range from $8 a month on the ground floor to $5 on top, or an average of $7 from each of twenty-four families. There is a grog-

"Why-pardon my remarking it-but, my dear old friend, how changed you are. I do clare you must have lived very high or very fast to have driven the color out of your hair and the spring out of your step this fashion.' Looking at the sunset on the river from the grounds of his place up the Hudson, my school chum-who is now one of the best known mining experts in the country answered: "It wasn't fast living did it, but dyspepsia and nervous collapse, from over-work. I ought to have stopped years before I did. I was a fool. But who isn't, if you come to that ? "I am thirty-five years old," writes Mr Charles H. Watts, of Somers, Putnam Co. N.
