JOSH. T. JAMES, Editor & Prop. WILMINGTON, N. C.

SATURDAY, DECEMBER 1, 1883

Entered at the Postoffice at Wilmington, N. C., as second-class matter.

The New York World and Sun are discussing the merits of McDonald and Holman, respectively, as candidates for the Presidential nomination.

Whether any Democratic candidate can carry New York next year, says the World, depends on a variety of considerations. It must be seen what course the Democratic branch of Congress pursues next session, what candidate the Republican National Convention nominates and what use the Republicans make of their power in the State Legislature before an intelligent prediction can be made.

If the wise action of the Democratic House of Representatives entitles the party to public confidence, and especially if the Republican policy in the Legislature and the Republican candidate for President should be of the old machine character, New York will most probably support the Democratic candidate. If McDonald should lead the Democratic forces he will present to the people a record which with one or two exceptions, is such as to command respect and support in New York. He may not be a stern, ideal reformer and economist, but he is an honest man with sound principles and with the courage of his convictions. On financial questions he has always stood on impregnable ground, and his action in Congress has been such as to command the approval of the great business interests of the Union. He has always been judicious and wise in his position on tariff reform.

Senator McDonald is a self-made man. Commencing life as a saddler, he took a fancy to the law, studied, qualified and acquired a good reputation at the bar. His career appeals to the popular imagination. He is of the people. He has no part or sympathy with the new-fangled notions of a shoddy aristocracy.

There is one objection to Senator McDonald. He helped to confirm Stanley Matthews for the Supreme Court. This is a most serious objection in our eyes, but it is one which the Sun does not urge against him. If this is to be waived, we can see no justification for the statement that, under favorable circumstances for any other candidate, McDonald cannot carry New York.

HOW GEN. STONEWALL JACKSON WAS TAKEN FROM THE BATTLEFIELD AT CHANCELLORSVILLE.

What Mr. Capps, the Ambulance Driver, Says of It.

The following correspondence has been kindly placed at our disposal by Mr. T. J. Capps, a citizen of Onslow county, a former member of Co. E, 3d North Carolina Regiment, who was the driver of the ambulance which carried the gallant and lamented Jackson off the field of battle. The correspondence explains itself.

WILMINGTON, N. C., Nov. 13, '83.

DEAR SIR:—I have just received a letter from Col. Sloan, who is writing a history of the part North Carolina took in the late war, and he asks me to get from you your story of the bringing off of Stonewall Jackson from the battlefield at Chancellorsville. Do not delay it any longer, but forward it directly to me, and I will look it over and send it to Col. Sloan. I will see also that you get a copy of the book containing it.

Yours very truly, THOMAS F. WOOD.

NEW RIVER, ONSLOW COUNTY, N. C., Nov. 21st, '83.

Dr. Thomas F. Wood, Wilmington, N. C.

DEAR SIR:—Yours of the 13th inst. just received, and I make haste to send the information desired.

Gen. T. J. Jackson was wounded late in the afternoon of May the 10th, and not at night as some suppose. I am certain of this, because I was ordered to go after him before sunset.

Late in the afternoon I was ordered by Dr. McKee, our brigade surgeon, to move out of a small valley (where I had been placed with five other ambulance drivers) up a hill, beside a plank road, between the battlefield and the railroad, with orders not to leave there without instructions from him. I had been there about an hour when an officer rode up and said: "Driver, whose ambulances are these?" I replied, "They are in Dr. McKee's charge." He then said: "I order you front." "Whose order is it?" I asked. "I order you front," was the answer. "I cannot obey any orders except from Dr. McKee. Who are you?" "I am Captain Williams," was his reply to this. "Well, Captain, I cannot leave here without Dr. McKee's permission," I replied. He then said: "Well, this is the order of Gen. Jackson." "Certainly then, Captain, I'll obey the order." "Come on," he said, and started ahead.

The sun was now about three quarters of an hour high. We drove on some three hundred yards, and the Captain's horse refused to go further, and he got behind. I halted for him to come up. When he did come up he said, "I cannot go any further." I replied that I would not know where to find the General. He then told me to go right on and I would find him lying on the left hand side of the plank road in the cross way. I drove on. This was the last I saw of the Captain. I was by this time in the midst of bomb shells and grape-shot, which were just high enough to go over my ambulance. My horses became frightened, and were hard to manage. However, I drove on about half a mile farther and when I arrived at where the General lay, I found him where the Captain said I would—on the left hand side in the crossway. There were with him a wounded Colonel, whose name I do not distinctly remember, but believe it was Nichols, and two men whom I took to be letter bearers. They were between where our lines had been and the Federal lines, close to the artillery of the latter, which were then cannonading heavily. I had some trouble in turning my horses, on account of one of them balking, which caused some delay, so that by the time I was ready to go, Gen. Jackson and the Colonel were both in, and I drove off with them for the hospital.

When I had driven a short distance Gen. Jackson said, "Driver, drive more carefully." I immediately reined in my horses, which were still frightened, the best I could. Soon after this I was obliged to quit the plank road on account of a bridge on it having been destroyed. Where I turned off the road was rocky and uneven, and the General said, "Driver, can't you drive more easily?" I replied, "General, one of my horses will balk if I rein him in too much." He said no more. We soon arrived at the field hospital. It was now about one hour and a half after dark. Upon our arrival at the field hospital we were placed under a guard; a doctor took his seat beside me. I was ordered not to answer any questions that might be asked me by any one whom I might meet, and under escort of the guard we proceeded on our way to the corps hospital, and at which place we arrived about 3 o'clock.

A large tent had been pitched for the General about three hundred yards from the hospital, on the south side of it. I drove straight to it, delivered my "charge," was kept under guard until daybreak and released.

I cannot say precisely in which, but I believe it was the left arm in which Gen. Jackson was wounded, for I believe he lay on his right side while in the ambulance, and that the Colonel lay on his left side. Gen. Jackson was wounded within half a mile of the Chancellorsville hotel.

This is my recollection of the bringing off of Gen. T. J. Jackson from the battlefield. You are at liberty to condense if you see fit. What I have written is simply true, and nothing more.

Very respectfully yours, T. J. CAPPS.

PERSONAL.

Mr. St. John, ex-governor of Kansas, receives $50 a night for lecturing in the cause of prohibition.

Mr. Mackay, the bonanza man, is in Galveston, presumably to invest money in Texas railroads.

W. B. Johnston has just ended at Webster, Mass., a buggy ride of eight months' duration, his starting-place having been San Francisco.

Mr. Irving's receipts in New York were as follows: First week, $15,773; second week, $18,714; third week, $18,880; fourth week, $24,321.50; total $75,687.50.

John Randolph, of Roanoke, used to ride on a pack mule to Washington. Senator Dolph, with half the name, is coming over from Oregon in a private sleeping car, a dining car and a car for a sitting room.

Judge Elliott, whose assassination at Frankfort, in 1870, caused much moralizing on the subject of Kentucky manners, is to have a $1,000 monument the money having been appropriated by the legislature.

Sir Joshua Reynolds' works, to the number of nearly two hundred, are to be collected and shown at the Grosvenor Gallery, in London, in the winter. It will be the only collection of the kind since 1815.

MOONSHINE.

It is understood that Mr. Arnold not only eats with his fork, but picks his teeth with it.

The new system of time is neat and convenient, but when a loud little clock strikes twenty-four, things will seem rather riotous.

One man connected with the New York morgue has handled 250,000 bodies, and a post-mortem examination fills him with delight. Perhaps he is from Massachusetts. (This is a joke.)

The newspaper foreman got a marriage notice among a lot of items headed "Horror of 1883," and when the editor learned that the groom's income was only $7 a week, he said it had better remain under that head.

The Virginians are not satisfied with the cold figures of election returns unaltered. Here is a specimen sentence in a report in the Newport News: "The sun has gone to rest, and the moon's silver beams gild our banners as they float triumphantly over a forever freed and happy people."

A young man near Abbeville, Ala., contracted with a farmer to work for him a year for his daughter and a double-barrel shotgun. The contract has been faithfully performed, and the man is now the happy possessor of the old man's bargain.

"Mamma," said a little Covington boy "what does 'heluffa' mean?" "Why, my child, I don't know. I never heard such a word. Where did you hear it?" "Papa said it." "When?" "Sunday morning. I heard him tell Mr. Jones that church was a heluffa place to go to when the fishing was so fine."

Dr. Benson's Skin Cure is without a peer. It consists of both external and internal treatment and costs only $1. per package. At druggists.

What is a Blood Corpuscle?

A blood corpuscle is one of the smallest things on earth. It is a flat little disc, not exactly round, but nearly so, and not quite the thirteen hundredth part of an inch long.

Blood corpuscles are closely laid alongside of each other in your blood. They are of a bright red color. They owe this color to the iron that is in them. But for this red color of the corpuscles, the blood would be a colorless fluid.

As the blood rapidly goes its rounds through arteries and veins, driven by the heart, the corpuscles go with it, forming a very important part of it.

If there is not enough iron in the blood, the corpuscles suffer. You cannot feel a corpuscle, nor can you see one, except with the microscope. But you can tell that they suffer, by finding out that you are weak and poorly and pale. The cheerful red that is on a healthy cheek is owing to the iron in the blood corpuscles. When the cheek is blanched and pale and looks almost lifeless, it is because there is not enough iron in your blood.

"How can I get iron into my blood?" asks somebody whose acquaintance with that metal is in the way of nails, pokers, horseshoes, or railway rails. The iron in the blood is the self-same metal as in the heavy hardware. But oh! in such a different shape!

There is a wonderful preparation of iron that is made so that it nourishes the blood by entering into it and becoming a part of it, thus traveling through arteries, veins, and heart. This preparation is an important part of Brown's Iron Bitters, the medicine which has acquired such fame as a builder-up of broken-down systems, and an invigorator of the blood. Brown's Iron Bitters gives you the health and strength which you can obtain from no other source.

Telling it Very Short.

"I'll tell it, sir, in few words if I can, but the story would fill a book if justice was done to it."

"Surely, Michael, but put it about this time so's I can squeeze it into a page of left paper."

"Here you are, sir, then and there are thousands of people here in Birmingham, N. Y., who will testify to the truth of what I say. My name is Michael Gullfoyle. I am seventy-four years old. For about nine years I was almost shut out from the world by rheumatism. I had peddled small wares in the city for years, and had to stop altogether. At the best of times I could only hobble miserably about with my cane. I was bent nearly double with pain and weakness, and my hands were useless to labor with. I was but the poor wreck of a once strong man. None of the medicines simply given for rheumatism did me the least good, sir. My old friends in the city forgot me, as though I were under ground."

"With the end o' my nose and the tip of my toes turned up to the roots of the daisies. My days and nights were doleful and painful. I had no hope except in death. That is God's truth, and Mr. Mosher, here, knows it. 'I can't tell you how, but PARKER'S TONIC cured me. That was three years ago. I'm lively as a cricket now, sir, and go my business rounds every day, rain or shine. You may tell this to all the world, and refer the doubters to me.'"

This preparation, which has been known as PARKER'S GINGER TONIC, will be called simply PARKER'S TONIC. This change is made for two reasons: first, because ginger is an unimportant flavoring ingredient, and secondly, because unprincipled dealers deceive their customers by substituting inferior preparations under the name of ginger.

There is no change, however, in the preparation itself, and all bottles remaining in the hands of dealers, wrapped in the old paper of PARKER'S GINGER TONIC, contain the genuine medicine if the fac simile signature of HESCOX & Co. is at the bottom of the outside wrapper.

Harper's Bazar.

ILLUSTRATED.

Harper's Bazar is at once the most brilliant and useful Household Journal in existence. It is the acknowledged article of fashion in this country. Its fashion plates are the best and most stylish; and its pattern sheet supplements and economic suggestions alone are worth many times the cost of subscription. Its illustrations of art and work are from the best sources; its literary and artistic merits are of the highest order. Its stories, poems, and essays are by the first American and European authors, and its choice art pictures would fill portfolios, and its humorous cuts are the most amusing to be found in any journal in America. A host of brilliant novelties are promised for 1884.
