GRARDMOTHER GRESHAM

It has been said, with a good deap of truth, that every man has a hobby. and that,

"On some favorite hobby we all get astride,

And when we're once mounted, full ga'- Raudall, Pendleton, Bayard, Thurman, to pick you up.' lop we ride.'

At present it seems that Postmaster General Gresham has a very favorite hobby which consists in an endeavor to crush the Louisiana State Lottery. We presume that he is riding this hobby on a highly moral caddle and urges on the steed with highly moral spurs and whatever damage he inflicts is as a punishment for a great moral wrong. He is persistent, in season and out tion upon a basis of grand moral ideas. But it seems to us that, as the Louisiana State Lottery is organized, the question considered. Whether moral or not. there is abundant evidence that it is patronized liberally, and we we have very fair testimony that at each drawing more or less of the ticket holders secure a prize of more or less value. This may be a very wrong method by which to obtain the riches of this world and uncoubtedly to many it has proved anything but a certain way to secure a fortune But those are not questions, although of great importance to the general public, which at present ought to disturb the serenity ot tion. We are not speaking of the right or wrong of the lottery business, but we are speaking of the right or wrong of Mr. Gresham's conduct regarding this particular lottery company. The Louin 1868, and by a popular vote its franchise was made a part of the present State constitution, which was adopted on the 2d of December, 1879, so that it is now a part and parcel of the organic law of a sovereign State, which has been recognized as such by both Houses of Congress, by the President of the fact by every department of the government. By the Postmaster General's either Louisiana is in rebellion against CARBOLIC SALVE is effecting a cure the government, via the State Lottery, or the United States is at war with Louisiana, via the Postoffice Department. That war exists is evident from the fact that the Postmaster-General has commenced operations against Louisiana by cutting off such supplies to the lottery as have heretofore been conveyed through the mails. These tactics have been in a measure overcome by strategy on the part of the Lottery Company, and Mr. Greshain is now casting about to see how he may further cripple his antagonist. His latest idea is to exclude from the mails all newspapers which contain the advertisements of the Lottery Company, but as there are a good many newspapers in the country which publish these advertisements and a good many publishers who take payment therefor, it may be assumed, with a great degree of safety, that the latter plan will not work successfully or with any degree of comindividvual at the head of the Postoffice Department a long life of health, pros perity and usefulness and would deeply regret to see him hastened to an
