A SKEPTIC SAID

When the doctor comes from his office at night, at a very late hour, in a dubious plight. The impression prevails and the story is told. That an editor's wife can be always cajoled. With a fib about "bridges" and "broken down press."

But we who have been there are free to confess. That when husbands are late and suspicious are rife. It is best to own up to the editor's wife. All such fables are cruel, and men are unkind. To label a sex of such generous mind. A sex who economize all through the year. That she may afford to exhibit them here.

The women who scrupulously, patiently wait. For the annual feast at three dollars per plate. For all the wild joys in the circus of life. A banquet seems best to the editor's wife.

But, all jesting aside—since I dimly surmise. That the ladies regard me with sister eyes—Who more than the wife of our bosom deserves. The sweet veneration her beauty preserves? And the years may go by and our heads may grow white. Her beauty grows ever as pure and as bright.

As when she faced poverty, sorrow and strife. And blessed our estate as an editor's wife.

And some of us, glancing back over the years. Can call up sweet visions, all hallowed by tears; A dress, or a toy, or a hood that is torn, Or a quaint little shoe that a baby has worn.

Or a white little face lying under a pall. And a moss-covered grave over yonder, that's all! But we know the great grief that has clouded the life. And broken the heart of an editor's wife.

You may drink to your trade and your creatures of fame; I raise not my glass till I hear her sweet name; 'Tis to her who alone uncomplainingly bears. The all of our sorrows and most of our cares. Whose wealth of sweet influence subtly inspires. Our grandest achievements and noblest desires; 'Tis to her I would drink—our companion in life—God's best inspiration, the editor's wife. —Eugene Field.

THE EDITOR'S WIFE.

(Read at the Annual Banquet of the Chicago Press Club.)
No eloquent thought and no flowery word,
That the most of you, listening enraptured, have heard.
Could allure me from viands so temptingly spread
That I've missed the extempore speeches you've read.
But my heart beats responsive to one theme divine—
The woman we drink to in bumpers of wine:
So I threw down my napkin, my fork and my knife
To speak to the toast of "The Editor's Wife."

And of course you'll agree—since our wives are all here.
To brighten the scene and partake of our cheer—
That the best of all angels kind heaven has sent
To bring a man sympathy, peace and content.
To add to his joys and to lessen his woes.
To sew on his buttons and patch up his hose,
And to smooth out the kinks and the wrinkles of life,
Is the idol we worship: the editor's wife.
When the editor comes from his office at night
At a very late hour, in a dubious plight.
The impression prevails and the story is told
That an editor's wife can be always cajoled
With a fib about "bridges" and "broken down press."

But we who have been there are free to confess
That when husbands are late and suspicious are rife
It is best to own up to the editor's wife.
All such fables are cruel, and men are unkind
To label a sex of such generous mind.
A sex who economize all through the year
That she may afford to exhibit them here.
The women who scrupulously, patiently wait
For the annual feast at three dollars per plate.

For all the wild joys in the circus of life
A banquet seems best to the editor's wife.
But, all jesting aside—since I dimly surmise
That the ladies regard me with sister eyes—
Who more than the wife of our bosom deserves
The sweet veneration her beauty preserves?
And the years may go by and our heads may grow white
Her beauty grows ever as pure and as bright
As when she faced poverty, sorrow and strife
And blessed our estate as an editor's wife.

And some of us, glancing back over the years

Birthday Dinner.

EDITOR DAILY REVIEW.—Dear Sir:—It has been customary for many years for me to give you an outline of the many enjoyments of that joyous occasion. If you remember the 26th day of January is the birthday of our good old friend, Mrs. Nelly Hand, and on Saturday last we celebrated her 88th birthday at Mr. Sam P. Hand's near Burgaw. The only bickering that ever occurred in the family is as to who shall furnish the dinner. She has four sons and one daughter living, and every one is anxious and put out, if they are not allowed the privilege of furnishing the dinner. The lot this time fell to Mr. Sam Hand, the youngest son, and well it was, judging from the entertainment given by him and his most estimable wife, Mrs. Hand.

Never in my life have I seen a day pass off so pleasantly. There were only a few invited guests: and your correspondent was one of that number; and I assure you, if in no other way, I was highly entertained to see and hear that good old lady, as is her custom on all occasions that present themselves, smiling upon her children and grandchildren, and speaking to them words of advice in such God-like language and tone—it often melted them to tears, and touched the sympathetic heart of her many friends. When at dinner, after a blessing was asked by the oldest son, Mrs. Sam P. Hand, who presided at the table, offered a toast for the health, prosperity and happiness of her mother. Several had remarks to make, and all spoke so feelingly of Mrs. Hand that you would have thought her mother would have been the grandmother (a little fellow) in the interim, remarked "That Grandmother looked young yet, only her skin was too big." It is so, Mr. Editor, if it was not for the corrugated appearance of her face, you would scarcely expect her to be over 60, but still she is 88 years old. It is scarcely necessary to say one word about the dinner when I tell you it was prepared by Mrs. Sam

Hand. Everything that a fastidious taste could call for was there, and elegantly prepared, and all without a solitary exception did justice to the dinner, and arose from that table thanking God for his mercies to Mrs. Hand, and praying that she might be spared for many years to come, and that every one might be so fortunate as to be her guest again.

Would that you had been there. I know how you generally enjoy such things, and Mr. Hand wished for you more than once. Hoping that you may often experience the feeling that I felt that day, I will close.

Hunting for a Wife.

A good story reaches us from Milan. A young nobleman of that city, of a fortune of $4,000 a year, not long ago came to the conclusion that it was time for him to look out for a wife. His pursuits in life not being of the most strenuous character, he had leisure to combine amusement with research. Accordingly he advertised his want in a Milanese newspaper, requesting that every answer to the advertisement should be accompanied by the portrait of the lady who replied. A collateral result of this notice was that two or three of the best photographic artists of the city had more work on their hands than they could attend to. The direct result was sixty five letters, with as many maidenly commendances as would furnish a good-sized album. The answers were in some cases accompanied by parental certificates, setting forth in touching language the charms and virtues of the daughters. Embarrassed by a choice of such unexpected variety and desirous to gratify that sense of humor which even the serious nature of his quest could not repress, the young man replied to each of his correspondents that, before coming to a final decision, a personal—not exactly an interview, but inspection would be of advantage. To each of the ladies of course, without the knowledge of the others, he sent a ticket for an orchestra stall in the Scala theatre, announcing that he himself would be in a particular box, the number and situation of which he stated. A few evenings later the theatre-going public of Milan were perplexed to explain the appearance of one of the rows of stalls in that immense building. A long line of beauties, in toilets of extreme elegance, unbroken by a single black coat, was observed. Furtively, and with trepidation, did each damsel from time to time raise her opera glass to that box—the cynosure of many bright eyes—in which the graceful youth reposed. Suspiciously and with darkened brow did each damsel turn to the long file of her neighbors and wonder at the magnetism which drew each glass to the one central point. By-and-by the audience, to whom some hint of the secret had leaked out, began to give audible signs that they enjoyed the joke. The sporadic laughter of the theatre increased the confusion of the young ladies, and the contagion of fun turned the sporadic mirth into a general roar. At this point our Milanese correspondent drops a veil over the scene, concluding his narrative with the trumpet call, "Daughters of Eve, revenge!" I question if that young man will get married in Milan.—Brooklyn Eagle.

"No license" does not bother the inebriate so much as "no ten cents."

"Did She Die?"
"No, she lingered and suffered along, pining away all the time for years, the doctors doing her no good; and at last was cured by this Hop Bitters, the papers say so much about. Indeed! In deed! how thankful we should be for that medicine."

"A Celebrated Case."
It seems probable that Mr. Michael O'Connor, of Galesburg, Ill., is not related to the celebrated Charles O'Connor. He says: "Samaritan Nervine cured me of dyspepsia and general debility."

Letter From General John E. Mulford.

23 DEY STREET, NEW YORK, October 8, 1883.

For years past I have used ALLOCK'S POROUS PLASTERS on my person and in my family, and have found them perfect as an external remedy, quick in their action, giving immediate relief, without blistering the skin, and far superior to all others. No family should be without ALLOCK'S POROUS PLASTERS; their healing powers are wonderful, and their efficacy far-reaching and lasting. When in Washington last winter I was induced to try another much advertised plaster for severe pain in my back. No relief from the pain, but a sore and blistered back for a week was the result. So soon as the blisters healed I applied two of ALLOCK'S POROUS PLASTERS, and they gave me immediate and permanent relief. They give additional strength and vitality to the spinal column, and they are a never failing remedy in my family for Coughs, Colds, Sprains, and all Pains and Weaknesses. Their use has repeatedly saved me from Rheumatism. I constantly use them, and would not be without them for any consideration.
