Mrs. L. G. Romick, the evangelist, recently officiated at a marriage ceremony in Columbus, O., probably the first instance of a female performing such a ceremony.

A Northern journal thus speaks of the adjournment of a Republican convention: "The Opera House was speedily emptied and the neighboring bar-rooms quickly filled."

Notwithstanding Mr. Tilden's recent declaration, the first State Democratic Convention, which was held in West Virginia, indorsed him for Presi dent and instructed its delegates to vote for him.

Some of the Republican papers that are loudest in their praises of Blaine, whose record is black with traud, are making frequent mention of Senator Edmunds in connection with the use of the Yantic by Mrs. Edmunds and their invalid daughter.

Atlanta has concluded not to erect a building at the Cotton Centennial and make a separate exhibit. After considering the matter, the conclusion was reached that the separate exhibit plan is impracticable. Atlanta will be found in the main building.

The Fortnightly Review asserts that five years of good harvests in Europe, coupled with a maintenance of the food supply of Australia and India, "would go far to reduce two-thirds of the apparently prosperous enterprises in the United States, now carried on with English capital, to temporary bankruptey."

C. C. Haskell, of Norwich, Conn., who is James († Blaine's publisher, declares that already he is at work on the second 200,000 copies of Blaine's book, that he expects to print a million copies, and he booms the book by an nouncing that it will contain a fine picture of Roscoe Conkling and also fiftyseven more prominent persons, many of them Democrats.

The California papers take exception to the wording of the press dispatch concerning the recent earthquake in San Francisco. The Bulletin says not more than four deaths are traceable to earthquakes in California during its history, something, it holds, that cannot be said of one Kansas cyclone or Dakota blizzard. The last earthquake 18 spoken of as "a very insignificant affair."

There was a big freshet near Atchison, Kansas, last Friday night and it is reported that the creeks there rose at the rate of three feet a minute. The report fails to state how long they kept it up but it is to be presumed that they have before this suspended operations in that line. Three feet a minute is 180 feet to the hour or 4,320 feet to the day and at the end of four days' (at this time) the said creeks would be 17,280 feet high; say three miles. No, we can't exactly believe the report.

Andrew Blair, who was charged with disorderly conduct and whose case was continued until to-day, was brought before the Mayor this morning for an examination. Mr. Marsden Bellamy appeared for the defendant. The court imposed a fine of $10 for the offense, from which sentence the defendant appealed to the next term of the Criminal Court.

Goldsboro.

We had occasion a day or two since to visit the thriving town (is it a town or a city, Bro. Bonitz?) of Goldsboro, and were impressed not only with the beauty of the place, but with the evi- sympathy. The inauguration of this dent prosperity which was everywhere enterprise, irrespective of sex, section, manifest. A great number of houses party or creed, is the truest, noblest, and other buildings were in course of erection and in various stages of advancement towards completion, among which were some that were tasty in architectual design and expensive in style and finish, while many were less costly and evidently designed for less wealthy people. These latter were nest and comfortable in appearance. The suburbs were being rapidly filled up with new buildings, and everywhere could be seen the indubitable signs of prosperity and thrift. The Society of the Methodist Episcopal Church are building a beautiful and expensive house of worship, elaborate The rainfall for the 24 hours ended at in design and finish, and entirely in seven o'clock this morning amounted to keeping with the growing wealth of the one inch and 16-100. What a feeble, almost impotent, and the senses have been enchanted and poem. awe-stricken with the sight or intoxicated and enchanted with the glorious sounds, yet the tongue could express no adequate idea of either. The performance by the Mendelssohn Quintette Club, of Boston, at the Opera Houselast night, was one of those sublime treats with which all who were present were delighted, but which no one, however rich he may be in the treasures of descriptive language, may adequately describe, and when the attempt is There are no more entertainments made words become impotent and valueless. Notwithstanding the miserable weather there was a good audi ence. mainly of those whose refined and cultured tastes could appreciate and enjoy a treat of such rare excellence, but no one could describe it, even to his own satisfaction. Every performer was an artist in his fession and perfect master of his partic ular instrument. The solos were by Mr. Sam Franko, violin, Mr. Thomas Ryan, clarionette, and Mr. Fritz Giese, violoncello, and each was a master piece of art and skill. With each there were a richness and purity of tone, a skill in execution and a delicacy and refinement in shading which were truly wonderful. The selection for the concerted pieces was excellent, and it would be difficult, where all were such rich musical gems, to tell which was the best. All were superb, but there were harmonies and cadences in Franz Schubert's quartette, in minor, which gave a peculiar charm to us, such as none of the others did, although the opening quintette, by Mendelssohn, and the quartette in G Op. 18., were particularly fine. The vocal part of the entertainment, by M'me Cora Giese, was very fine as was attested by the audience in repeated demands PARSLEY & WIGGINS, for encores. She has a fine stage presence, a rich and carefully modulated voice of great compass and power, and made a delightful addition to the enter-tainment. We hope that they may be induced to visit us again. .

Bread or Stones?

It is related that when the mother of Robert Burns saw the shaft erected to the memory of her illustrious son she plaintively said "Puir Robbie, he asked for bread and now that he is dead they give him a stane."

The ladies of the South, with a love and patriotism worthy of them, have, with each returning Spring, hallowed the memories and scattered bright flowers upon the grayes of "Our Fallen Braves." This is well and all right thinking people commend them for it The custom is alike beautiful, touching and appropriate, and aptly illustrates that the age of chivalry is not gone. But while we honor the dead let us not forget the living. The dead, wrapped in their gray, sleep well and are beyond the reach of hurt or harm, but all over our Southland are heroes, who bear as many scars as did the toughest veterans of Wellington, in disease or penury. The cause for which they fought being lost there are no coffers from which they can draw, but they stand and knock at the great heart of humanity, asking aid as a rightful charity.

There is a movement on foot to build, at Richmond, a Home where these needy but worthy Confederates may pass the remainder of their days secure from want, and the great heart of the North is responding to the great heart of the South in substantial aid and sublimest clasping of hands across the bloody chasm, and the future historian will so write it.

It is a beautiful instance of mercy and truth meeting together righteousness and peace kissing each other. Wilmington has an interest in this enterprise, and as the time is rapidly approaching for the annual memorial exercises, we would beg to suggest to OFFICE 323 SOUTH FOURTH STREET, the ladies of the Memorial Association the feasibility of taking some steps towards giving, an entertainment, the proceeds of which to be devoted to this praiseworthy object. While we give flowers and tears to the dead let us also give bread and prayers to the living, and He who gathers our tears in His hands, will send back answers to our prayers, and the bread that is cast upon the waters will return to us at other times and in other ways and the scattered flowers will tade only to bloom again more beautifully in the flora of the skies.

Rough Usage.

The steamship Benefactor, Capt, Tribon, from New York, arrived here a few minutes before noon to-day. As she came into port she presented an appearance indicative of hard usage, as her maintopmost and main gaff were absent. She carried away her topmast in a gale of wind on her last passage to New York, and it had not been replaced. Her gaff was sent ashore in New York.
