Edible Sea Weed.

While at Cayucos a few days since we saw, among the many other things on the wharf, ready for shipment, a number of bales of a species of sea weed, kelp, or sea moss, whatever the proper name may be. The substance is a soft, black leat, wilted dry, resembling slices of rubber. It is collected in quite large quantities by the Chinese from the rocks that are submerged by Big men,-Little men, high tide, dried and baled in matting, and sent to San Francisco and China, where it is used for making soup, and for food, being used as cabbage or lettuce. We found it not disagreeable to eat, having a salty taste, and imagined it would do very well for Chinese .-San Luis Obispo Tribune.

Beyond doubt tencing developes gracefulness in deportment, contributes to habits of active bodily strength, and by bringing all the muscles into play, prevents sluggishness in the circulation of the blood, which tells on the expansion of the lungs. These effects are of self evident importance to persons of weekly constitutions and of sedentary habits. The science, too, corrects defects of temperament by inducing habits of patience, discipline and self-com. mand Enthusiasts claim that fencing imparts an intellectual character to the features; less open to discussion is the a Copartnership under the name and style of assertion that it begets ease and ele-Actors, aye and actresses, and even oraspeech.

Making a Queen.

Bees do not usually want more than one queen. In fact, they will not have more than one unless the swarm has grown so large as to crowd the hive and they are going to found a colony, or "swarm," as it is called; in which case each family will need a sovereign. As soon as it is clear to the wiseacres By an overwhelming popular vote its franchise was made a part of the present State that it will be necessary to send off a swarm, the bees go to work to make a queen. A worker mazgot, or if there happens to be none in the hive, a workcomb. Two cells next door to the one in which this maggot is are cleared out, to one. The food which the worker and the little creature is supplied with a new kind of food-a royal jelly. Change of food, a larger room, and a bangs down instead of being horizontal-these three changes of treatment turn the bee that is developing from a worker into a queen. In the government museum at Washington there is a coat with gilt trim mings bearing this inscription: "Coat worn by Gen. Santa Anna. This coat was captured by Capt. Wheat, com-manding Gen. Winfield Scott's body guard during the Mexican war." The Mexican Minister pronounces the garment a fraud-first, because it is too small to have been worn by a man of Santa Anna's stature; and second, because from its trimmings it must have belonged, not to the commanding general of the Mexican army, but to a lieutenant of artillery. The garment was presented to the government by the heirs of Capt. Wheat in 1852.
