PILATE'S QUESTION.

From a sermon at St. John's: What shall I do then with Jesus, which is called the Christ?-Matt. xxvii, 22.]

And Pilate s'ord irresolute. That awful question in his heart: And dreams and warnings all were vain.

To make him choose the better part. Before him there in majesty That made him pause-the Saviour stood.

Then Satan entered in his heart-Never an impulse more of g od. He turued away and washed his hands And I am innocent, he said;

A dreadful chill crept o'er his heart. For blood his guitty hands had shed. And wounded conscience turning still, The veil is rent, the sun grows dim, And still the question ever comes-

Him That is called the Christ?

A few brief years had come and gone, The night was gathering round him

The mighty Potentate and Judge-An exiled suicide at last: A calprit standing at the bar-Oh! vanish years, oh! vain regret, To drive away that other day-

To but forget-to but forget The very Christ whose blood he shed. The same eyes gazing on him now. So sad, so powerless to save, So very like, the eyes and brow.

That question ringing through his soul-Twas that that crowned the bitter cup No need to read his sentence there, Twas but as he had done to Him

That is called the Christ.

Just as to Pilate to us all,

The Chrisi is standing at our heart In pleading accents, begging us That we will choose the better part We cannot turn and wash our hands And send the questioner away,

But just the answer that we give It needs must be the other day. Oh! wanderer from your early home Oh singing birds, oh new-mown hay Your father with his silver hair-Just as you saw him that last day, And watched you with his wistful

His step it grew more slow, they say-

He thought to lean upon your arm As feet grew tired and eyes grew dim,

He leaned upon a stronger arm-Oh! say what will you do with Him Your father's Christ?

And yet there comes a gentler touch, As once upon your fevered brow A tire ess hand so softly stole;

You seem to feel her presence now. That thin white hand-you did not

That you could shed those boyish How swift the hours are rolling back.

With all their bitter weight of years! Your mother with her gray brown hair, And looking in your childish eyes, And listening to your lisping prayer. Ah! then that look — that last long

Married and gone. It is the same old story. Love and courtship. Then coines the engagement ring and a blessed interval of fond hopes and happy dreams and then the day is fixed-the auspicious day that is never to be forgetten-a day that brings happiness or misery and begins a new life. Then comes the license, the permit of the law which says you may marry, you may enter into bonds. The state approves it and the law allows it and it will cost you only a dollar and a quarter. Cheap, aint it? and yet it may be very dear. Then comes the minister, and the happy pair stand up before him and make some solemn vows and listen to a prayer and benediction, and they are PAST IMPOSSIBILITIES THE FACTS OF THE one In a moment the trusting maid has lost er name and her free will and is tired fast to a man. as we ought to. I never made any mistake about my choice of a partner for the dance of life, but I've thought of it a thousand times that if Mrs. Arp had known I loved codfish and got up by day break every morning she never would have had me. It was nip and tuck to get her anyhow and that would have been the feather to break the camel's back. Well, I'm mortal glad she dident know it, though I am free to say that if I had known she slept until the second ringing of the first bell for breakfast and was fond of raw oysters, it would have had a dampening effect on my ardor for a few minutes, only a few. But I have seen some mighty clever people eat oysters raw and sleep late in the morning. But still a manand his wife can harmonize and compromise a good many of these things, and it is a beautiful illustration of this to see Mrs. Arp cooking codfish for me and fixing it all up so nice with eggs and cream, and it is a touching evidence of my undying devotion to her to see me What will you choose me do with wandering about the house lonely and forlorn every morning for an hour or two, and forbidding even the cat to walk heavy whi e she sleeps. That codfish business comes to me honestly from my father's side, and my mother put up with it like a good considerate wife, and we children graw up with an i lea that it was good. I've heard of a young couple who got married and went off to Augusta on a tour, and the feller stuck his fork into a codfish ball and took a bite. He choked it down like a hero, and when his beloved asked bim what was the matter replied; 'Don't say anything about it, Mandy, but as sure as you are born there is something dead in the bread.'

Well, we can make compromises about all such things as habits and tastes, but there are some things that won't compromise worth a cent. If a girl has been brought up to having a good deal of freedom and thinks it no harm to go waltzing around with every gay Lothario who loves to dance, and after she gets a feller of her own, wants to keep at it and have polluted arms around her waist, she had just as well sing farewell to conjugal love and domestic peace, for it is against the order of nature for a loving husband to stand it. and he oughtent. There is another thing that ought to be considered, and that is age. A few years makes ho difference, but an old man had better be careful about marrying a young wife. He won't be happy but about two weeks, and then his misery will begin and it will never end. It may be better for a woman to be an old man's darling than a young man's slave, but she had better be neither. When a girl marries an old man for his money the has gone back on herselt, for money den't bring happiness. Maney helps, but money with a dead weight is a curse—an aggravation. I was talking one day with bility. an old man, a Frenchman, who had made a hermit of himself and was cians, living all alone in the woods, and he said: "Mine friend, I have make one names, grand meestake. Mine first wife whom I matry ven I vas young, yas an angel from heaven, God bless her! but mine last wife vas a devel from,' and he pointed down. 'I vas old and she vas years before using it.—THE PARENTS. young. I had money and she had none. You seem to see her kneeling there, I marry ber in a hurry and repent at my leisure. I try to live with her for tree years, but we were compatible. It was against de order of nature, and I find myselt a fool and a prisoner, and so I geeve her half my monies and run away from her and hide in dis wilderness, and here I vill live and here I vill die. and ven I go oop to St. Peter and tell heem how dat voman devil me on earth, de good man vill open de garden gate and say come in my brother, for you have had trouble enough.'

Country marriages are generally happier than those made in cities among the families of the rich. Children raised to work and to wait on themselves make better husbands and better wives than those raised in luxury. It is mighty hard for a man to please his wife if she eas been petted by her parents and never knew to want and had no useful work to to do. She soon takes the ennui or the conniptions or the 'don't know what I want,' and mnst go back to ma. A young lady who never did anything after she quit school but dress for company and make visits and go to the theatre or the dance will never make a good wife. This wife business. It is right hard work to play wife. The mother of six, eight or ten children has seen sights. She kno-s what care is, and work is, and one of these do nothing women cant stand it. If she is not a used up institution with one child, two will finish her and if it wasent for condensed in a month after they were born, and sorter like the cows in Florida. I heard a Florida man say the other day that a Florida cow dident give enough milk to color the coffee for breakfast and they had to raise the calves on the bottle. Getting married ought to be a considerate business. Folks oughtent to get married in a hurry, neither ought they wait four or five years; six months is long enough for an engagegrown folks who have settled down in life, and know what they are about. than to see a good looking healthy young man who is making an honest living stand up at the altar with a pure, sweet, good tempered, affectionate, industrious girl, and the parents on both sides approving the match. Then the big pot ought to be put in the little pot and everybody rejoice. BILL ARP.
