he says, in the previous June. The Sentinel charges that after the second secret marriage in Pennsylvania, in March, 1851, Blaine returned to Kentucky and passed himself off as a single man, as the following personal letter from a Kentuckian of high standing, who knows Blaine well and has no ill-

will against him, shows: DEAR SIR:—I have read Blaine's letter's to Phelps. I do not believe his statement of a secret marriage. He lett Diennan Springs in December, 1851. After the session closed for vacation in June of that year he remained at Drennan Springs through the watering season and passed himself off as a single man; at least no one knew he was married. I understood at the time, and have heard it reliably stated often since, that during the summer of bly two ladies. This conduct of his can be easily proven. In March of 1851 he was absent at Pittsburg, but returned and staved through the watering. and stayed through the watering season and after that taught until December.

Did Not Get It.

The wives of popular city clergymen are often supplied, is it said, with "pin money" by their husbands' wedding fees. But the wife of a rural minister. especially, one living "Out West," often finds that nothing remains of the lee atter the husband has paid for the hire of the buggy in which he drove to the bride's house. The following story illustrates how both the expectations of wife and husband are sometimes blight-

A young western farmer appeared at and bashful. After the usual tell-tale evasion, he made known the real object

"You see, Mister Preacher," said he, 'me an' Sallie Toodles have about - er, that is-I mean er-well, you see-we've fixed it all up to git married, and we sorter wanted you to tie the knot, if Dr. Dodd's Nervine No. 2. agreeable. 'Y-yes," said the minister. "I see. How far is it to Mr. Toodles's residence?"

'Oh, about fourteen mile. That's nothing to stand back fur. Guess

"I have not; but I could hire a horse and buggy, I suppose."

But," continued the fellow, shifting uneasily in his chair, "p'raps I'd qught to be square, an' tell you somethin about the pay. You see, I ain't got no big lot of cash, an' I've got to buy lots of things; housekenning the square in the squ know. An' me an' Sal, we thought likely you'd be willin' to do the job an' take yer pay in good coon skins." The proposition made the fourteenmiles' drive in a hired buggy seem less desirable to the poor minister. But desirable to the poor minister. But thinking that the coon-skins could easily be turned into cash, he consented to the arrangement. When he told his wife, he remarked that a "coon-skin would be a good reminder of the frankness and honesty of the industrious young fellow. I like to encourage him, too, so I shall not accept much of afee."

After the ceremony had been performed, the minister, as he prepared to sept 20 start for home, intimated to the happy Platform of the Democratic bridegroom that there was room in the buggy for the coon-skins.

"Well, now, you see, Mr Preacher," was the reply, "I ain't kotched them c ons yit. But I'll make it all square with you. I've got two mighty fikely pups, and I low to ketch some coons soon's the pups git big enough."

The disappointed minister lost his exman. The last he deplored more that he did the first.
