The Daily Review. JOSH. T. JAMES, Editor & Prop. WILMINGTON. N. C.

Entered at the Postoflice at Wilmington, N. C., as second-class matter.

Considerable significance is attached in New York to the declaration of State Senator Thomas F. Grady in favor of the renomination of Tilden and Hendricks as the Democratic Presidential ticket in 1884. Senator Grady is a Tammany leader and the inlimate personal and political friend of John Kelly, and his pronunciamento in favor of Tilden is believed to have the approval of the Tammany chieftain.

The interest felt in the Virginia elec tion is attested by the action of sixtyfive wholesale firms in Richmond, who have signed a paper stating that, in view of the "great importance of the approaching election," they have agreed to keep their travelling salesmen in the city until after they have had an opportunity to vote. In Staunton, Norfolk. Danville, Liberty and other citics, the business men decided to close their places on election day, in order that their employees might work for the success of the Democratic ticket.

In England an absurd fashion has set in of undervaluing pictures as ornaments for a room The room itself. say the apostles of the new dispensetion, must be a picture. Nothing but decorative art is permissible. An art patron not long since got a well-known decorator to produce an ideal diningroom. When it was finished he asked : "Where whall I put my pictures?"-The reply was: "Your pictures would spoil the room. You must build a pleaded: "But I bought my pictures which is foreign to all others. to live with!" Fewer and fewer pic tures are now hung on English walls. A novel real estate project in Chicago is the building of an artificial island in in residence lots and selling them to wealthy citizens who may wish to live where they can see the city without formia square or circular enclosure, with walls made of loose stone and rising to a safe level above the water of fuse and rubbish from the city till a plateau for the future town shall be it. secured. It is thought such an island would be a romantic and attractive try in a new channel. Mr. Gladstone place of residence. A compact little telegraph company is being organized to do business be tween the New York Produce-Exchage and the Chicago Board of Trade. It was proposed to put up wires at first, but it was not easy to get a right of way, and the plan is now to buy the oughly effectual, and they all unite in Charles H. Watts, of Somers, Putnam Co., wires put up by the Nickle-plate Railroad line. They run from Weehawken to Grand Crossing, eight miles from Chicago, and can be had for $1,-000.000. of the law. We change our rulers and although it is not always done without discord yet it is effected without violence and without the slightest tremble in commercial and financial circles. Last Thursday the command of the army was transferred from one man to another and the fact was scarcely commented upon. It is as the New York World says:

Without a ripple of oxcitement, almost without attracting a passing notice, the command of the army of the United States was last Thursday transferred from General Sherman to Lieutenant- Fayetteville and offices on Cape Fear General Sheridan. A general order Fayetteville, via Lumberton, daily, 6,15 P. M. ten lines his relinquishment of the com- Onslow C. H. and intermediate offifrom General Sherman announced in mand. A general order quite as brief from Lieutenant-General Sheridan gave notice of his assumption of the com-mand. Then the two generals held a reception and when it was over paid a visit together to the President." Only this, and nothing more.

In any other country a change in the head of the army would be an occasion of excitement if not of commotion In many governments it could scarcely be attempted without revolution. Here we have no need of a standing army except as a frontier patrol. Our soldiers take the character of police Probably the only notice taken of the change in regret that a position of such honor should descend from a man of brains to 2,30 A. M. and culture to a rough, coarse- and illiterate trooper.

How happy is a country whose strength is in its people instead of in great armics and powerful navies, and whose glories and triumphs are those of peace and not of war!

A growing child is exposed to more risks than an adult. The system is in its formative state, and very receptive. If contagious diseases are in the atmosphere, the child is particularly exposed to them. Diseases which will pass over a full-grown man or woman will attack a growing child, and often with fatal effect. A growing child is liable to all manner of accidents. Cuts, wounds, bruises, and casualties of various kinds may happen at any moment Were it not for the natural elasticity of children, the death-rate among the young people would be far larger

A growing child is worthy of the very best care. It should be guarded against disease and accident.
