THE DAILY REVIEW.

VOL. IX. WILMINGTON, N. C., SATURDAY, JANUARY 31, 1885 NO. 27.

The Daily Review has the largest bona fide circulation of any newspaper published in the city of Wilmington.

Wilkie Collins has just celebrated his sixty-first birthday anniversary.

Twenty-five ex-Confederate officers are in the United States Senate and more than fifty in the House.

The Princess Louise is modeling a statue in bronze of her royal mother, to be placed in Lincoln Cathedral.

An exchange suggests that when John Sherman leaves the Senate he be made coroner-at-large for the State of Ohio.

Boston society having decided that it is not safe to come within range of Prof. John L. Sullivan, the Boston Post hints at the enlistment of a corps to lasso him.

Exposition correspondents at the Crescent City describe President Disz's wife as only 25, tall and slender, with a long Roman nose, and no doubt she has an equally long Spanish-Mexican pedigree.

Immigration into the United States last year fell off over 100,000 persons compared with 1883. The loss of revenue to the steamship companies alone at average rates for passage must have amounted to two or three million dollars.

Ex-Senator Sharon's daughter, Lady Heshbeth, is coming from England to console her father over the Hill affliction, which proved such a mountain of matrimonial difficulty to the San Francisco jury which endured the protracted trial for divorce.

A member of the Institute of France has proposed a scheme for the foundation of a number of annuities of the value of 2,000,4,000, and 6,000 francs to aid scientific men in the prosecution of experimental work, offering to subscribe himself 5,000 francs toward the realization of the scheme.

Senator-elect Stanford, of California and New York city, is one of the four great statesmen who went into Central Pacific comparatively poor men and came out millionaires—this famous quadrilateral being composed of Leland Stanford, C. P. Huntington, Charles Crocker and Mark Hopkins.

We publish, by request, on the 3rd page, the "old but ever new" poem, entitled: "The Blue and the Gray." The origin of this is in doubt, but from information gathered from the most reliable sources we think that Judge F. M. Finch is to be accredited with the authorship. It is singularly beautiful and tender, and can never grow stale while patriotism finds an abiding place in the human breast. It was inspired by a newspaper paragraph stating that, two years after the close of the war, the woman of Columbus, Mississippi, had shown themselves impartial in their offerings made to the memory of the dead, strewing flowers alike on the graves of the Confederates and of the Federal soldiers.

The din of the political conflict is hushed and the smoke of the battle has cleared away, and now that we have attested our devotion to Republican institutions and Democratic principles will it not be in decency and in order to exhibit a little genuine patriotism and philanthropy by renewing the agitation of a Home, or the granting of pensions by the State, for the needy and deserving men who by their valor and fortitude wrote, with their blood, the brightest and most glorious pages of her history?

In our recent strife it required little more than the free shedding of ink and other fluids, but in those days that tried men's souls something thicker and of a deeper crimson was requisite.

The relics of the "Lost Cause" are justly the foremost patriots of history. Many of them are needy, and it is, indeed, hard in their age and infirmities to eat the bitter bread of penury or compulsory charity. We boast of our patriotism and then allow the heroes who won for us the claim of patriots to go unprovided for.

These brave men in their long, fierce, bitter struggle for bread have been forced to the conclusion that patriotism is a poor possession and war a bad investment.

To-day the South is vying with the North in her love for the "brother in black" and has all most wept the fountion of her tears dry over his condition, and her bowels of compassion have yearned over, and the cockles of her heart warned towards, the heathen Chinese, but she has been remiss in her duty to the brave men who gave health and fortune to her defence.

For two decades we have been honoring our noble dead whose joys we cannot augment or whose sufferings palliate, but the needy living have been fed upon the unsubstantial pabulum of oratorical vaporings.

The President's coat pocket protruded so much at the recent Florida fishing that some one asked the reason why. "It is only a bottle of Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup," the handsome gentleman explained. "I never travel a mile without it."

Day's length 10 hours and 26 minutes. The storm signal was flying again this morning.

There were no interments in Bellevue Cemetery this week.

Sunset to-morrow afternoon at 27 minutes past 5 o'clock.

The receipts of cotton at this port today foot up 258 bales.

No tramps applied for lodgings at the guard house last night.

To-morrow is known in the church calendar as Septuagesima Sunday.

There were three interments in Oakdale Cemetery this week, all adults.

There were two interments in Pine Forest Cemetery this week, both adults.

"Local rains" are getting to be very frequent, and in fact are becoming monotonous.

The first month in 1885 will step quietly into the history of the past at 12 o'clock to-night.

The rain, mud and a generally dull market made business slow in cotton and naval stores to-day.

The lawyers of this city who have been absent at the Convention of the "Members of the Bar" at Raleigh have returned.

The Register of Deeds issued six marriage licenses this week, three of which were for white and three for colored couples.

The ordinance of baptism will be administered to several candidates at the close of the services at the First Baptist church to-morrow night.

Two parties were brought before the Mayor this morning charged with non-payment of licence tax, but were discharged upon their paying for the same.

Nor. barque Falken, Christensen, cleared to-day for Glasgow, Scotland, with 600 casks spirits turpentine and 1,328 bbls rosin, valued at $10,200, shipped by Messrs Alex Sprunt & Son.

The Democratic caucus has awarded the State printing to Mr. P. M. Hale, of the Raleigh Register. The vote stood 62 for Mr. Hale, 34 for the News and Observer and 19 for the Raleigh Chronicle.

At the Old Stand.
We invite attention to the advertisement of Mr. L. G. Cherry, in this issue. He has returned to his old stand, corner Market and Second streets, where he has opened a wholesale and retail liquor, cigar and tobacco house. He keeps on hand a stock of fine liquors for family and medicinal use and invites the attention of those in need to the same.

Good Order.
At the police headquarters there is a general complaint of dullness. Policemen say that after nightfall the streets are as quiet and orderly as if every day was a Sunday, and the arrests are consequently remarkably few. This speaks well for the good order and general sobriety of our citizens, and we hope that it may continue indefinitely.

Church Services.
Rev. Dr. Wilson, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church, will leave the city to-night, having been called away by the death of a member of his family—a grandchild. In consequence of this, there will be no services to-morrow forenoon at the First Presbyterian Church. Rev. J. W. Primrose, of the Second Presbyterian Church, will preach at night, at which time the usual collection will be taken up.

A Weather Sign.
Next Monday, the 2nd of February, is the day on which it is said the ground-hog comes out from its winter's retreat and prognosticates the weather. If it sees its shadow, that is, if the sun shines, it goes back into its hole, and remains six weeks longer, during which period wintry weather will continue. Our readers can prove the truth or falsity of this old tradition by noticing next Monday whether the day is bright or cloudy, and then see what the weather is for the next six weeks.

The Lecture Last Night.
Prof. Proctor delivered his second and last lecture last evening to an audience equally large and cultured as the one which graced the Opera House the previous night. The subject of his lecture was "The Sun," about which he discoursed most felicitously, giving his hearers a great deal of new and curious information respecting this grand old monarch of the skies. To the better informed portion of his audience the lecture last night was, perhaps, more interesting than that of the previous evening, but the majority, doubtless, were better pleased with the former. The only objection to be urged against the lectures, is that he is too rapid of utterance. There is a vast amount of mere conjecture in all scientific knowledge, so-called, theory conflicting with theory; and the majority of even people of culture are less informed upon the subject of astronomy than that of any other science—hence the difficulty in keeping pace with the distinguished lecturer. The audience manifested its appreciation by the most earnest attention and once or twice by applause.

Prof. Proctor's visit to Wilmington will long be remembered by those who heard him, and we trust that some at least may be induced to pursue that grandest and most fascinating of all studies.

[COMMUNICATED]
Mr. Proctor's lecture last night was a rare treat for those who have taste for and have made the great science of astronomy a study. It requires many years for men even of such talent as Mr. Proctor to master the subject. (In so far as it can be mastered,) and of course, it requires years of reading and thought for other men to grasp even the ideas of the wonderful problems, involved. But Mr. Proctor has the faculty for making abstruse ideas and facts tolerably plain. He explained briefly in the outset the theory of the genesis of the solar system, as held by the great Laplace, Herchel and others in the past, and which is taught by such men as Winchell, Steele and others to-day (the planets being thrown off from the sun) and expressed his disbelief in that theory. He gave many interesting figures as to distance, size and constituent elements of the sun, which very materially differ from those given in many of the school-books. He said the size of the sun is greater than that of the whole planetary matter, not 650 times nor 750, as some of the books say, but 729 times. (Some say 675.) Some of the best astronomers, he said, thought the great fiery jets from the body of the sun were burning hydrogen, 33,000 miles high. He did not believe it, but thought they were composed of denser matter, much of which never returned to the body of the sun. The diameter of the sun is 108 times that of the earth; not simply 100 times greater. So great men differ. And, quoting Prof. Young, he said: "He who never makes mistakes has never thought deeply enough to benefit his race." Altogether, the lecture was a fine one. STUDENT.

At the Old Stand.
The steam tug Blanche arrived in below this morning from Beaufort having in tow a scow for use in dredging the channel of the Cape Fear.

Steamboatmen report about seven feet of water on the shoals in the Cape Fear, with the river falling slowly.—Probably the rains of to-day will cause another rise of greater or less magnitude.

Few of our citizens, we imagine, have an idea of the amount of dog tongue which is brought to the city for shipment. There were 22 bales of the leaves of this plant on one of the wharves to-day, which would average more than 600 pounds each.

Some Corn.
Mr. R. S. Murray brought into our office to-day a curiosity in the shape of an ordinary ear of corn with five small ears growing around and attached to it, making six ears in all. The corn on all the ears was well developed and perfect. It was raised by Mr. Israel Keith, on Riley's Creek, Pender county.

New Drug Store.
Mr. J. D. Nutt's new drug store, corner of Front and Mulberry streets, is a perfect gem. It is neatly and tastefully arranged with a good line of drugs and chemicals and a fine display of fancy goods. Mr. Nutt is an experienced pharmacist and gives his personal attention to all prescriptions filled there.

Notable Improvements.
Mr. F. W. Ortman has lately made some notable improvements to his Club Rooms, on Second street, between Market and Princess. He has leased the premises on the second floor of the building and has had the rooms nicely furnished and is now prepared to furnish lodgings at low rates by the day, week or month.

Who Goes?
"Are you going to attend the inauguration of Grover Cleveland at Washington, on the 4th of March?" That is the question asked by nearly every one. It will be an eventful time, and the capital city of the Republic will be a sort of political Mecca at that time whither people from all sections of the country will direct their steps. It was 28 years ago when the last Democratic President was inaugurated. On the 4th of March, 1857, President James Buchanan took the oath of office.

Mr. E. C. Robertson, Carthage, Mo., states: "I used St. Jacobs Oil for rheumatism in my knee joint, and was greatly relieved."
