The Daily Review

JOSH. T. JAMES, Editor & Prop.

WILMINGTON, N. C.

SATURDAY, MAY 2, 1885.

Entered at the Postoffice at Wilmington, N. C., as second-class matter.

The King of the Belgians, who has just celebrated the completion of his fiftieth year, may be said to enjoy one almost unique distinction among the reigning princes of Christendom. Born heir apparent to the crown, he succeeded a father who died a natural death at a good old age and in secure possession of his sceptre. The King of Italy was seventeen years old before a kin, dom of Italy existed. The King of the Greeks is the founder of a dynasty. The Czar ascended the throne of a murdered predecessor. The Emperors of Austria and Brazil derived their titles, in the first instance, from "acts of abdication" in their favor consequent upon revolutions. The Kings of Prussia, Sweden and Portugal all started in life as younger sons, the King of Denmark as a distant cousin Queen Victoria, at the date of her birth, stood but fifth in succession to the crown.

The English gun factories consist of forges, smith's shop, rolling mills, pattern shop, brass and iron foundry, gun-boring mill, tool rooms, turneries, lighting room, field gun section, engine-repairing shop, with other branches. In these various departments are at work some 600 machines, lathes and boring machines, drilling machines, other machines for rifling, planing, slotting, shaping, milling, screwing, lopping and wheel cutting. Twenty weighing machines record and regulate the production: two circular saws are at work, and 240 vises are waiting to grip anything they can get hold of. Then fifty-four furnaces continually do blow, with the aid of six blowing fans, while there is engine power to the extent of 700 horses, and boiler power to a much greater extent. And the factories can produce 6,000 tons of guns, from the light mountain howitzer to be carried on the back of a mule, to the latest Woolwich infant of 80 tons or more. At the head of the factories are two or more artillery officers, while the general staff consists of 21 clerks, draughtsmen, and timekeepers—24 foremen, 386 artificers, and 571 laborers and boys; while as for total annual cost, the guns take in round numbers a quarter of a million from the annual estimates.

While discussing the strained relations existing between England and Russia the last action of England should not be overlooked. By the seizure of Port Hamilton England has secured the control of the Korean Strait and possesses a Gibraltar which guards the southern entrance to the Japan Sea. The Nan How group of islands consists of the two large islands Sodo and Sunhodo, with a smaller island called Observatory Island. The larger islands are deeply indented, their northern ends almost meeting, while Observatory Island is situated between their southeastern points, forming the spacious and well sheltered harbor known as Port Hamilton, the main entrance to which is in the southeastern part of the group. This entrance will admit vessels of the greatest draught, while the northern entrance, 250 yards wide, may be used by small vessels in fine weather. The holding ground is excellent, and there is room in the harbor for a large fleet. Port Hamilton is so well protected that it affords shelter in the worst weather. By occupying the island England has removed her base of supplies, in the event of war, over one hundred miles nearer to Vladivostok, the principal Russian port in Siberia. As Port Hamilton is only 140 miles from Nagasaki, where the inexhaustible coal mines are being worked, she can, within two weeks, make a depot of coal, which will last her fleet for months. The reasons which influenced the English Government to seize upon Port Hamilton are thus made plain. The Russian cruisers in the Sea of Japan must remain there, and those out in the North Pacific will be kept from reaching their base of supplies.

We have read many handsome obituaries in our day, many well conceived and well expressed tributes to departed worth, but the following, which is dedicated to the memory of the late Isaac W. England, publisher of the New York Sun, whose sudden death we have recently recorded, is one of the most eloquent, terse and sincere, yet at the same time undemonstrative tributes we have ever read. We would be glad to have one-half of it written of us truthfully when we are gone:

To THE EDITOR OF THE SUN—Sir: I assisted to-day to place in lasting rest Mr. Isaac W. England, now for so long the publisher of the Sun, and before the piteous flowers strewn on his grave are faded, I ask a little space where, with a few rough strokes, I may sketch him as he seemed to me.

He was a manly man, cast in a generous mould, so that his faculties, manners, habits, whatever pertained to him, became noticeable and impressive, and he took rank at once anywhere as a strong masculine nature, worthy to be listened to, and not easily to be put aside.

His intellectual powers were of a high order. With greater mental placidity and evenness, he would have approached our Franklin, for his intuitions were clear and profound, and his mind philosophical. He owed almost nothing to early instruction; was, as fully as any man may be, self-made, yet his best informed associates constantly found cause to marvel at the extent of his knowledge, for he seemed to have given study and reflection to almost all themes of human interest.

His impulses were high and noble. The errors and vices of society saddened and distressed him. His sentiments toward woman were pure and chivalric. He instinctively took the side of the weak against the strong, and longed to see men grow better. He hated cant, hypocrisy, duplicity, all meanness, with a steady, angry impatience of them, loved and practised sincerity, openness, plain speaking and dealing. "I have been trying to think," said a friend of his to-day who knew him long well, "how England would have treated a man who should come to him with a mean proposal of any kind," meaning by this what form his indignation would take.

No honest man ever lived. There are thousands of men whose honesty may be swerved if the motives are strenuous enough. No one ever imagined it of him, for it was fundamental and ingrained in his character. He was generous—if one may be so—to a fault. Sorrow and need were ready passports to his heart. He corrected the errors and chid the faults of the necessitous with biting speech, with tears in his eyes, and a helping hand.

He stood, and this is the sum of all, a true man in his appointed place, doing all duties honestly and to the best of his might, and his course ended in honor. He sleeps well amid the rural scene beloved with so much natural heartiness, while the world is poorer by the loss of a sincere man.

A Youthful Editor.

HISTORY OF THE HARDEST STRUGGLE OF HIS LIFE—OF DEEP INTEREST TO ALL PROFESSIONALS.

We beg to call your special attention to the following letter. Very seldom has a more readable case appeared in the history of medicine. The story is absolutely truthful in every detail. Parents whose children are suffering or have suffered from Salt Rheum, should not fail to read it. If not now, the time may come when the information contained in it may be worth more than a mine of gold. The youth referred to is a marvel of editorial talent, and well known in the ranks of amateur journalism. But peruse what his grateful father says:

WORCESTER, Mass., March 23, 1884

Dr. D. Kennedy, Rondout.

DEAR SIR:—My son, a lad of 15, editor of the "Go-Ahead," amateur journal, of this city, has been at different times most severely, and apparently hopelessly, afflicted with Salt Rheum. When a very small child his body was almost entirely covered with this loathsome eruption. It mostly passed away, however, after the teething period, and he was not seriously troubled with it again until about one year ago, when the Salt Rheum first appeared on his hands between his fingers, then on his limbs, then on his face and head in one solid mass. His condition was terrible. The rash resembled ivy poisoning and we at first fancied it might be something not so bad as his old troubles, but the physicians pronounced it Salt Rheum, and made every effort, without avail, to cure it. We tried a preparation widely advertised as a specific for skin diseases, but it made about as much of an impression, as so much cold water would have done. You can understand the situation when I say we were in despair of obtaining real help from any source.

At this point, through the advice of Mr. J. W. Bacon, whose daughter had been cured of Salt Rheum by it, I tried "KENNEDY'S FAVORITE REMEDY." This was the right and only thing at last! The skin began to heal at once, and to-day the evidences of the disease have wholly disappeared. How thankful we are, Dear Doctor, I leave you to imagine.

Yours, J. W. BATCHELDER.

No. 7 Ferris street.

The experience of years, and the testimony of thousands demonstrate DR. DAVID KENNEDY'S FAVORITE REMEDY to be the most successful medicine for all blood and skin diseases ever discovered. Prepared solely by DR. DAVID KENNEDY, Physician and surgeon, Rondout, N. Y.
