Opera House.

There was another large audience at the Opera House last night to witness the play of "The Two Orphans," as Co. The troupe has been deservedly growing in popularity ever since it has been here, and the performance last night was fully up to any of its predecessors in point of merit. Some of the acting last night was excellent, while none of it was poor, and the actors received rounds of applause for the conscientious performance of their respect- together with a great many others, at ive parts. To night the temperance drama of 'Ten Nights in a Bar Room" will be the attraction, and it will undoubtedly draw a large audience. The company will give a matinee to-morrow afternoon, and will also play to morrow night, which will be their last appearance in this city, as they will leave on the steamer for Fayetteville at 12 o'clock Saturday night to play an engagement in that city.
