SIC TRANSIT.

When shall I my darling wed? Softly to my love I said, When the violets sweet were blowing, Like her blue eyes gently glowing. And the wintry winds had fled; lowly did she make reply: When the swallows homeward fly."

Summer, with her gorgeous train, Swept the violets from the plain; Lilies gracefully were bonding, Roses sweet their perfume sending On the June time air again; Still she answered lovingly: When the swallows homeward fly."

Glorious Autumn, clothed in gold, Drcked the woodland and the wold. But my heart-my heart is sighing, For the swallows homeward flying, Brought a presence grim and cold; For my love with eyes of blue. Homeward with the swallows flew.

Now a spectre grim!y stands, Beck'ning me with outstretched hands; Cold the snow is drifting, drifting, O'er a new made grave is sifting, pr. Biggers' Huckleberry Cordial is the great Southern Binds my hands in ice bands; ora, Dysentery, Cramp-Colle and Never from the icy chain Will my heart be free again.

Subterranean Forests.

' If you want to see something curious," said a friend who was a member of a government survey, 'go down with me to Woodbine." Four miles beyond Woodbine, out on the sand stretch of old sea bottom or beach, that is termed the Cape May peninsula, we came upon Dennisville, where all the Dennises of all time had evidently settled.

"We're all in the loggin' business," said a tall, thin Dennis, yet as far as the eye could reach not a tree could be seen standing that would make even the ghost of a fair log. "They're 'underground. We dig for them, as you might say. Here's the tool," and step ping into a low but he brought out a and deserves the praise that are showcrowbar that, like everything else, ered upon it from all who have used it seemed attenuated, and was stretched Mr. Israel H. Snyder, of Saugerites, out into a long, slender pointed rod. N. Y., says: "My little daughter was "We wade along," continued the man, covered with Salt Rheum from head to we strike a log we feet around, and it cured her. This was two years ago. it's a good one we dig it up, and if it ain't we let it soak: that's about the gist, or write to the Doctor at Rondout,

"So, down-in Jersey you burrow for your logs?" "That's about it," replied the man.

'You know we're obliged to be a whit odd or so; we've got the name of it,

"The secret of this business," said my friend, the geologist, "is that ages ago all this area was covered with a fine growth of large trees, and the same are found growing in some parts of the swamp yet, but they have died out and fallen down and sunk into the soft mud, and so been covered up by mold and mud, until many other layers have grown over them; but in some remarkable way the wood is preserved and these sunken ancient logs are just as good for shingles and other articles as they were when alive; hence for many years there has been a steady hunt for them, and Dennisville is a result of the the evergreen white cypress, and the in them. numbers that once grew over this swamp and that have been entombed or all of these, singly or combined. are beyond conception. The trees upon or near the surface are the only ones available and fortunately are the best, but far below there are probably myrlads of others turned to stone and representing the past geological ages of the earth. The logs were worked out by the men who are nicknamed 'Swampoodles,' and who live in the midst of the malarious district all their lives. When a log is tound a ditch is made about it, into which the water soon flows. A great saw is then arplied and the roots removed, and as a rule the log will rise to the surface and can be cut up and carried off, though in many localities the shingles are made right on the spot and dragged over the swamp on roads in many cases made of boughs and twigs. This curious business is not confined to New Jersey. but over in Delaware and Maryland there are similar swamps, where the shingle business has been carried on for years. One of the swamps in Dela-ware extends over twenty-five square miles, and hardly a house in Sussex county but what is shingled from the ancient deposit .- Phila. Press.

The humorous stories and pictures are full of innocent fun, and the papers on natural history and science, travel, and the facts of life, are by writers whose names give the best assurance of accuracy and value. Illustrated papers on athletic sports, games, and pastimes give full information on these subjects. There is nothing cheap about it but its price.
