From most reliable souresit is ascertained that an expedition was seen to embark about 11 o'clock on boarda small sailboat moored to one of the wharves on the northern side of this island. The number of men is stimated to be from fifteen to thirty. They arrived at the rendezvous in carriages, bringing packages of arms and ammunition. All were well equipped and had side arms. Sail was im-mediately hoisted and the boat proceed-ed by the inside passage among the kejs, and is expected to reach the outer cosst through one of the numerous channels above this island, where a large vessel with a contingent from some other point is said to be in waiting to receive them.

A most remarkable discovery has resuch an astounding nature that the correspondent hesitates to give the circumstances to the public on account of being barred at present from giving names, although is no good reason why it should not be done. However, the gentleman who has made the discovery proving beyond the possibility of a doubt by scientific means the existence of the human soul; laying bare the greatest secret of nature and proving the doctrine of eternal faith "that the soul of man doth live," the disclosures and proofs of which will shortly startle

For the sake of convenience the gentleman alluded to will be called Mr. Holland, a man of small stature, a mild eye and thoughtful countenance; a. derout Christian, possessing a peculiar belief that the soul of a man is a counterpart of the body itself; and in this beory of the dual man he sought the key of life and death. He reasoned that within this body of bone and sinew was yet another body existing in zapory form which death alone should free, and that by a simple microscopic device the dull sight of human eyes might penetrate the minutest particles of the air we breathe, and see the soul take another world. His attention was first attracted to this, he says, by a man lying on a sofa suffering with a pain in through my mind, until at last I resolved upon an experiment."

He aughingly accompanied me to my fooms and did as I desired. The moment I adjusted the glass a world of revelation broke upon me. The dual hand lay beneath my glass. I asked him to make letters with his imaginary loger. He did so, and to his wonder and astonishment I spelled out the senand, "and you know the rest."

Flag Drill,

The meeting at the armory of the Wilmington Light Infantry last night of the young fadies who are to take part in the exhibition flag drill, was well attended and much enthusiasm and a good deal of interest in the success of the undertaking was manifested. Lieut. F. I. Meares, of the Infantry, was the drill master, and Mr. W. T. Johnson, of the Cornet Concert Club, was the drummer. The instruction last night was principally devoted to the facings and salutes. About 20 young ladies participated, and they made excellent progress so far as they were instructed.

The committee on uniforms, who were appointed at a previous meeting, were also present and made their report. The style of uniform which they have concluded to adopt is very pretty and artistic, as the following descrip-

Some Other Particulars of the Blow at Smithville,

SMITHVILLE, Aug. 28th EDITOR DAILY REVIEW :- I have not seen any account of the late storm that does justice to its effects here.

The effects of the wind are corres oondingly severe.
