The inscrutable wisdom of our Creator has been forcibly presented to-day streets. to our minds. Our esteemed friend and former associate has gone to "that bourne from which no traveller returneth," and leaveth us sorrowing and regretful that we shall no more see him in the busy marts of life nor in the sacred circle of home.

An active, energetic factor in the naval stores trade, his views were sought, his advice considered, and, while man nestness of purpose, his probity and his severe integrity. Genial, cordial and affable in his disposition, no tale of distress appealed to him in vain. Frank and open-hearted he was, in purse as well as in spirit, and in all walks of life we can point to him as a man who tried to learn his duty and endeavored to follow it.

A resident among us for a long time, he made many friends, who look back upon the association with recollections Raleigh pays, as can be proven, the of pleasure, and regrets of all followed him when stern duty called him else-
