The Battenberg family, which is making rather a stir in Europe just now, is descended from one Hanck, a man of small education, who was editer of a newspaper in Warsaw sixty years ago. Prince Alexander of Hesse married the granddaughter of this man, and the result of this union was the now famous "Alexander the Greater," Prince of both Bulgarias; another son who married the Princess Beatrice of England, and a third who is son-in-law of the Duke of Hesse.

The old-fashioned spinning wheel was introduced a short time ago into the Isle of Man Insane Asylum with the idea of amusing the patients. The latter seemed delighted that they could in this way contribute to their support, and became so absorbed in their new occupation that their nervous symploms no longer predominated. As Dr. Richardson, the medical superintendent, expressed it, the direction of the beryous force was changed, and their condition was improved. The experi- riable. ment is to be tried in other asylums.
