FOR COUGHS AND CROUP USE TAYLOR'S CHEROKEE REMEDY

SWEET GUMS MULLEIN.

The sweet gum is gathered from a tree of the same name, growing in the small streams in the Southern States, and contains a stimulating expectorant principle that loosens the phlegm, soothes the early morning cough, and stimulates the child to throw off the false membrane in croup and whooping cough. When combined with the healing medicine, it forms the most powerful remedy for Coughs, Croup, Whooping Cough, and Consumption; and so palatable, say the doctors, that it is well suited for the young.

A Lending London Physician's Estimation on the Cause of Epilepsy.

From Am. Journal of Med. Science, N. Y., 1885.

"The author is a specialist of Epilepsy who has treated and cured more cases than any other living physician. His success has simply been owing to the fact that he has cured more cases than any other living physician. His success has simply been owing to the fact that he has cured more cases than any other living physician."

THE VOICELESS NIGHT.

In the still silence of the voiceless night, When, chased by airy dreams, the slumbers flee, Whom in the darkness doth my spirit seek, O God, but Thee?

And if there be a weight upon my breast, Some vague impression of the day foregone, Scarce knowing what it is, I fly to Thee.

Or if it be the heaviness that comes In token of anticipated ill, My bosom takes no heed of what it is, Since 'tis Thy will.

For oh! in spite of past and present care, Or anything beside, how joyfully Passes thine almost solitary hour, My God, with Thee!

More tranquil than the stillness of the night, More peaceful than the silence of the day, More blest than anything, my spirit lies Beneath Thy power.

For what on earth is there that I desire, Of all that it can give or take from me, Or whom in heaven doth my spirit seek, O God, but Thee?

"Bring Me a Dozen."

When Congressman Lawler, of Chicago, made his first visit to New York some years ago, a friend invited him to a restaurant, where they called for self-shell oysters. Lawler had never seen any before and did not know what they were. He liked them, however, and a few days afterward, wishing to again regale himself with some of the toothsome crustaceans, he hunted up the restaurant, walked in and sat down at a table, but he had forgotten the name of the food he desired. Looking over a bill of fare, he saw "lobsters." He called the waiter and said: "Waiter, have you lobsters?" "Yes," said the waiter. "Bring me a dozen," said Lawler. "A dozen!" exclaimed the waiter in astonishment. Lawler saw that he had made a mistake, but he was not going to admit it. "Confound you," he said, "don't you suppose I know what I want? Bring me a dozen." The waiter was cleared of everything that was on it, and Lawler picked up. He ate all he possibly could, called for a glass of brandy, looked up at the waiter, and said: "Waiter, I was not as hungry as I thought I was. How much is the bill?" "Fourteen dollars and fifty cents," said the waiter. "Why is it not as much as I thought it would be?" said Lawler. "Here, you needn't mind the change, and handing the waiter $15 Mr. Lawler walked out.—Fishing Gazette.

Seized Counterfeit Money.

"What becomes of the counterfeit money that is surrendered or seized from counterfeiters?" was the question put to Chief Drummond of the treasury secret service.

Chief Drummond said that it was unusual for any one to have possession of counterfeit money in large or small sums except counterfeiters and the lawful United States custodians. Tradersmen and others might have possession of one or two bills or coins, which had been passed on them, and which they retained as curiosities, but if they kept a collection of spurious money in their possession, they would be liable to arrest. When curiosity collectors keep the money in scrap books or in other ways they are liable to arrest on the charge of having counterfeit money in their possession. So stringent is the law that even imitations of Uncle Sam's notes or coins for the purposes of advertising are forbidden.

The secret service officers collect once a month all the counterfeit money from the United States officials who have temporary charge of it as evidence. The money is locked up in a safe, and every six months, if no longer needed as evidence against counterfeiters, is forwarded, along with what is seized in bulk, to Custodian Rock of the treasury department for destruction. The money is inventoried and described, and receipts are kept of all that is surrendered. The bills are macerated and the coin is melted down in the treasury mill at Washington.

In the past eight years the officers have sent about $500,000 counterfeit money of all descriptions to Washington.—New York Sun.

BRADSTREET'S

A WEEKLY JOURNAL OF TRADE, FINANCE AND PUBLIC ECONOMY.

Sixteen Pages every Saturday. Oftentimes Twenty Pages. Sometimes Twenty-four Pages.

FIVE DOLLARS A YEAR.

The foremost purpose of BRADSTREET'S is to be of practical service to business men. Its special trade and industrial reports; its weekly epitomes of bankruptcies throughout the United States and Canada; and the summaries of assets and liabilities, are alone worth the subscription price; its synopses of recent legal decisions are exceedingly valuable. As commercial transactions in the wider sense, arising from the information contained in BRADSTREET'S is of the first importance both to producers and middlemen.

The Trade and Agricultural Situation throughout the United States and Canada is reported by Telegraph to BRADSTREET'S up to the hour of publication.
