WASHINGTON D.C. May, 12, '87; A decided panic has been created in the Government Departments, here by rules are to be acplied to all within the classified service, exempt the $1,800 seem, would most need it, as, receiving very rapidly. the nighest pay, it is supposed to be charged with the most important duties. The grades between that and the $1 -000 class are thoroughly demorabzed. A vacancy occurring in any one of them, all in that next below, are to be to he Cierk who don't make 75 per cent. Many of them have 'nt pened a text book for years, and most of them knew but little ab ut them at any time, and yet are performing the simple duties of their stations, intelligently and well, and it seems like unnecessary cruelty to subject them to an examination that four tiths of them can't pass, and that prove but sittle when they do Most of them are too old for other employment-unable to dig and to beg ashs aed; you can well understand that the prospective ass of place gives them much concern. Or course they are all trying to "bone up" as the school boys call it, but most of them are too old to learn Few of them, I feat, will succeed as well as did our friend O'Suliiyan. But perhaps you didn't know Timothy, as it was in Charieston be dwelt.

When once upon a time an additional policeman was needed for the protection of the city. Tim and two other tellow countrymen applied for cal on Monday and he would make the appointment As they were going out he said: "I suppose you can all write your names?" "Oh ses. your promptly responded Tim's compatriot Tim was modestly silent; he did'nt know b from bullsfoot, so to But he fully realized that it he was to succeed he must be able to write He got a bookkeeper in one of the stores to write it out for him. and he practised it from that time on. When Monday came so came the ould-be policemen The Mayor said. Well, gentiemen, you will please write your names in this bo k." The two of in turn took the pen, and in the usual limping and broken-backed letters

Tim held back, and his companions. Tim stepped forward, took up the pen and dashed off in magnificent style surprise, one of them said 'Your Honor, perhaps you'd like to see Mr. O'Sulivan write your name?" The Mayor so beautifully, please write my name " He couldn't have done it if his life had been the forfeit, but his native wit was equal to the emergency. Throwing 00 well to forge Your Honor's name.

He got the place. So far these examinations have been, or the most part, the veriest humbug. in the Treasury Department, when one was to be examined for promotion, if he was in favor, he was furnished with list of questions and answers, which A lew years ago old Simon Cameron had a joung man appointed, and be Mr. Cameron, he told him of his rejective. ion. Simon swore some, and at once went to the Department to see about it. epartment, as a mistake had been made in his examition papers. They were found all right, and after gently chiding him for not telling the examiners that "Gen. Cameron was his friend," his commission was made

It is a notorious fact that those who pass the best examinations do not always make the best clerks. Pliny Miles the 'Iceland Traveller," a man olbigh literary attainments, was appointed to a clerkship in the Postoffice Department. He was tried at three desks and was a failure at each, and finally resigned in disgust.

No examination will prove a man's fitness for work. The only true test is
