The city ordinance regarding dogs

went into effect to-day, and all owners of canines who have not secured the requisite badges for the same would do well to attend to the matter without delay.

The only degree conferred by Wake Forest College was that of LL. D., upon Mr. Woodruff Wilson, son of Rev. J. R. Wilson, D. D., formerly pastor of the First Presbyterian Church in this city.

The gutter on Market street, North side, between Front and Second, needs some attention.

It is overgrown with grass and choked with mud. A weak attempt was made to clean it yesterday and four piles of mud were thrown up, where they yet lie. Healthy!

Preparatory to making some changes in his business before the Fall season, Mr. Sol Bear advertises in this issue some lines of his large stock which he assures us he has decided to close out. Examine his advertisement and you will find for sale some article you need.

Alfred Turpin, colored, not supposed to be any relative of the famous Dick Turpin, was brought before the Mayor this morning, charged with fighting in the street. Judgment was suspended in his case upon a promise of good behavior in the future.

The wreck of the blockade runner General Beauregard lies just outside the breakers at Carolina Beach, and a couple of four piscatorial friends went fishing yesterday to that place where they were remarkably successful. In a short time they caught 19 sheepsheads, besides brem, pigfish and blackfish, and their luck was so good they want to have their friends know of the place. An old wreck is an excellent place for fishing.

We were glad to receive a visit this morning from our good friend, Mr. Wiley T. Johnson, formerly of this city but now of Winston. He represents Brown & Brothers of that town, large tobacco manufacturers, and is here in the interests of his house. Rev. Dr. Pritchard returned from Wake Forest College on this morning's train, and will occupy the pulpit of the First Baptist Church as usual on Sunday. During his absence he attended the commencements of Chapel Hill and Wake Forest, he being a trustee in each of those institutions of learning.

There was quite a good audience at the Opera House last night, although, undoubtedly, a great many were kept away by the fearfully hot weather. The Acme Singing Association, who gave the concert, acquitted themselves finely. The conductor, Prof. Shepherd, proved himself entirely competent as a director, and the pupils whom he has taught gave evidence of careful training. The solos, duos, trios, quartets and choruses were well rendered and would have been much enjoyed save for the intolerable heat, which, aided by the numerous gas jets, made the entire building nearly as hot as an oven.

At the joint meeting of the Board of Magistrates and Board of Commissioners of Pender county, held on Monday last at Burgaw, it was ordered that a special tax for building a jail be levied.

The old Board of Education, consisting of Messrs. L. H. McClammy, T. J. Armstrong and Edwin Fennell was elected unanimously. There were but 10 votes cast against the special tax, which would seem to indicate that the people of Pender county are tired of boarding their prisoners in other counties and that they propose that in the future they shall "live at home and board at the same place."

It is expected that the Wilson Base Ball Club will be here early next week to indulge in a friendly contest with the Seaside, at the grounds of the latter. Probably two or more games will be played. It is also expected that the Seaside will go to Charlotte in the latter part of the week to play two or three games with the nine of that city. Nothing regarding either of these games has yet been definitely settled, but there are fair indications that the arrangements for both series will be perfected within a few days.

Headquarters for base ball supplies is at Heinsberger's.

Railroad Anecdotes.

We recently heard two railroad anecdotes, which, as they were genuine occurrences and can be vouched for, we think are too good to be lost, especially as both were live North Carolina incidents, with North Carolina men as the actors in the dramas:

NUMBER ONE.

A well-known and popular conductor on one of the roads of this State, who had grown gray in the service, but who shall be nameless, had been somewhat noted for his many encounters with insolent passengers, in which he had always been the victor. He has immense strength, great activity and, although polite and courteous to the deserving, his disposition has not allowed him to submit to insult; and when he was fairly roused he was considered "a bad man from away up the creek." Recently, however, he became converted, and since then in an unostentatious way he has made it appear that in some unaccountable manner it is possible to serve God and a railroad company faithfully at one and the same time. Not long since the sincerity of his christian life was put to a severe test, but he came out victorious as usual. A passenger at one of the stations got on to his train with some fishing poles, which he placed by the side of the car on the top of the seats, and then got off for a few moments. The conductor directed the porter to take the poles into the baggage car, which was done, and when the owner returned just as the train started, and found what had been done with them, he became very angry and indulged in all sorts of vile language against the conductor. The latter, during all this tirade of abuse, was in the baggage car and did not hear it. Arriving at his destination, the man got off the car and went for his fishing poles, which were handed him. He also went for the conductor, who was standing by the side of the car, upon whom he heaped all manner of abuse and vilification. The latter stood calmly looking at the angry passenger without uttering a word—something to the astonishment of those who knew what he would have done in former times under much less provocation—until the passenger had completely exhausted his vocabulary of abuse, when he asked in a smooth and pleasant tone of voice, "Well, have you got through?" to which the man replied that he had. The conductor, then, turned to one of the train hands, and in the same mild tone said, "Well, Silas, pull the bell." He then got upon the train as it moved off, leaving his irate passenger more discomfited and demoralized than the worst whipping, which the conductor was entirely able to give him, would have made him.

NUMBER TWO.

One day last week, at one of the stations on the Wilmington & Weldon Railroad North of Goldsboro, a half drunk, coarse colored man got on the train without having purchased a ticket. The conductor, upon finding that the man had no ticket, demanded the fare, which was 80 cents. The darkey declared that it was only 75 cents, and that the conductor wanted to make a nickel to put in his own pocket. After some coarse growling, at which the conductor preserved his temper, while the passengers were boiling with indignation, the passenger paid 75 cents and after much abuse of the conductor, he paid the other five cents. The conductor then went about his business without the least appearance of loss of temper, followed by abusive epithets from the passenger, who included the white race generally in his remarks, until the coarseness of the latter became intolerable. There happened to be in the same car a genuine "Tar Heel," who was in that blissful state of willing inebriety that would tackle anything or anybody upon small provocation, and after listening to the darkey's abusive language for a while, the former went to the latter and told him to shut up or he would pitch him out of the window. To this an abusive reply was given when the "Tar Heel" caught him and had nearly succeeded in throwing him out of the window when some of the other passengers came to the rescue. The fellow struggled with all his strength, but he was a pigmy in the hands of the stalwart "Tar Heel," and as the train was rushing along at the rate of 40 miles an hour at the time, he would in a moment have met with a horrible death but for the timely interference of the passengers who came to his rescue. It is needless to say that for the remainder of his ride the colored man was entirely quiet and well behaved.

Bro. Bonitz

The people of Goldsboro evidently part with Mr. Bonitz with a great deal of regret. And no wonder. For nearly twenty years he has been one of the vitalizing elements of the place, prominent in every good word and work for the upbuilding and prosperity of the town. This sentiment is well evinced in the following, adopted at the meeting of the Wayne County Board of Education on Monday last:

Resolved, That it is with deep regret that we part with Mr. J. A. Bonitz, as a member of the Board of Education of Wayne county. By his uniform kindness and courtesy, while serving as Chairman of our Board for the past two years, he has endeared himself to us. Being wedded, as he is, to the enlightening of the rising generation his judgment and his administrative ability have helped no little to instill new life into the public schools of our county, thereby placing them on a higher plane of usefulness, and let his lot be cast wherever it may, his efforts for the education of the children of our county will be held in grateful remembrance, and we, but voice the sentiments of our people in saying that he carries with him to his new field our best wishes for his prosperity and happiness.

Cresosoted Timber.

Col. W. P. Canaday, President of the Carolina Oil and Cresosote Works, was in New York a few days ago and while there was interviewed by a representative of the Mail and Express, to whom he related some very interesting facts relative to the cresosoting process. This has never yet been published here as fully as it is described in our contemporary and we therefore give our readers the benefit of it. Col. Canaday said:

"Cresosoting wood that has to be used in damp places is the only method to preserve it from the decaying effects of water and the insidious attacks of the teredo worm. Cresosote is a general name applied to the products obtained from the destructive distillation of wood, coal and other carbonaceous substances, and the temperature has risen above 200 or 300 degrees Fahrenheit. The oil thus obtained is termed cresosote oil and is an excellent preservative of wood. The philosophy of its antiseptic and preservative qualities is simple. The oil chokes up the pores of the wood, making it solid and preventing the further entrance of air, moisture or life. No germinal life can exist in wood thoroughly cresosoted, and the fatal teredo worm dies from the effects of the oil. You see the oil contains insoluble tar acids, not only antiseptic in their nature, but all possess the power of coagulating the albuminous or fermenting elements of green, sappy or unseasoned wood. How is cresosote made from pine? Well, heavily resined fatty pine wood, subjected to a heat of from 300 to 760 degrees Fahrenheit within closed iron cylinders, yields by distillation and condensation an excellent wood cresosote oil, suitable for the preservation of wood. When this oil is analyzed it is found to contain about 5 per cent. of tar acids, about 15 per cent. of lighter oils, insoluble in either fresh brackish or salt water. Experience shows that preservation of timber is mainly due to those cresosote oils which require over 400 degrees Fahrenheit for their volatilization, and that the pure cresosote, with less tar acids and with less light oils, gives the best results. Cresosote oil is forced into the wood by means of hydraulic pressure. The improvements made upon the old charring process are very great. There is a carbonized process which takes ordinary open-grained pine timber and subjects it to a dry, radiant heat, within suitable cylindrical surfaces, in such a manner as to drive out of the timber most of its sap and albuminous matter, dry the inside of the timber, charring it with its pores wide open and in condition to be completely filled with the oil. This process does not render the timber brittle. How much oil is required? Sawed lumber only requires eight pounds per cubic foot. In logs used for piling twelve pounds of cresosote oil per cubic foot is all that is necessary for its preservation. During the manufacture of cresosote oil a pyroigneous acid is condensed in the still. This acid in its crude and undiluted state is an excellent disinfectant. The progress made in cresosoting timber within the past few years has been so great it would be unsafe to predict to what extent it will be carried. Wood will be made more lasting than any building material."

Our Advice to You

In buying clothing for men, boys or children, do not allow yourself to be guided by glaring advertisements which promise to sell clothing lower than the Old Reliable. It is simply to draw your attention in hopes of selling you something at a larger profit. Why will men work hard all day for $1.50, $2 or $3, then throw it away when that sum could be saved in from 10 to 30 minutes by trading with I. SHRIER, whom we can recommend and who will deal honorably with you in every respect.

— You will find hoes, forks, shovels, spades, scythes, swaths and farming tools of all kinds at JACOB'S Hdw. Depot.

Lightning's Freaks.

At about half past 1 o'clock this afternoon, during the prevalence of the thunder storm, the house of Mrs. C. L. Rush, corner of Sixth and Orange streets, was struck by lightning, and about 15 feet on the Southeast corner was torn out and a large portion of the plastering in the house was torn down. The boards from the house were scattered in every direction about her yard and even into the adjoining yard of Mr. A. S. Heide. Mrs. Rush was the only person in the house at the time, and she, fortunately, escaped uninjured. A boy and a goat were under the house and the latter was slightly crippled. The electric fluid then entered the yard of Mr. A. S. Heide and tore up his flower garden, injured his cistern and burnt the tin gutters to a part of his house, but did no further damage. It was fortunate that no one was injured as there were several persons in the immediate vicinity at the time.

In Memoriam.

At the last meeting of Local Board of Fire Underwriters of this city the following minute was unanimously adopted and it was resolved that a copy be furnished to each of the daily papers with a request that it be published; also, that a copy be forwarded to the family of the late Col. Smith, and that a blank page in the records be inscribed with his name and dates of his birth and death:

MINUTE
Called together for the purpose of discharging a sad and mournful duty upon the occasion of the lamented death, on the 3d inst., of its presiding officer, the late Col. Wm. L. Smith, this Board records its unanimous testimony to his excellent judgment and his faithful and conscientious efficiency in the discharge of his duties as an Underwriter and as a member and officer of this Association, his uniform courtesy and gentlemanly bearing in all his intercourse with his associates, as well as with all others of this community, of which he has been a most valued and useful member; his kindness of heart to all and the charity and benevolence of his disposition; his firm support of right and fearless condemnation of wrong in every thing, and, above all, to the evidence which he uniformly gave of his respect and reverence for the Christian religion as the foundation of all true happiness in this life, and of all our hopes in the world to come.

Col. Smith was the first President of this Board at its organization in 1866, and has held the same position for the last ten years of his valuable life. It is, therefore, eminently fit and proper that this expression of our sorrow for his loss, and of our appreciation of his virtues, shall be spread upon the records of this Association.

W. W. HODGES, Vice President.
M. S. WILLARD, Secretary pro tem.
