For the Daily Review. THE STAR OF BETHLEHEM.

Have you seen the Star of Bethlehem, so bright in the early morn, All radiant in its splendor as when the Holy Babe was born?

Tis beautiful to look upon as it courses thro' the sky; To us it should be a reminder of Him who rules on high.

Indeed, as it led the wise men to where He first saw the light Even so, when we see it, may our hearts incline to right.

A Thrilliog Experience.

George Boker lives on the Heights, a suburb of this place, and his house is well surrounded by orange trees. Yesterday morning one of his children was heard to scream loudly in the grove, and a big house dog, hearing the noise, fiew to the child's relief. The mother heard the child's cries, but at first supposed the little one was playing, but as the child did not return, she became alarmed and ran out among the trees. Coming upon the little one, about 200 yards from the house, she almost fainted at the sight before her. On a slight hillock lay her child, while coiled on its breast, with head erect and tongue out, . as a huge rattler. Its ominous rattle sounded loud and warning, while its eyes shot forth sparks of fire as it slowly turned its heal around in a circle, keeping watch of the dog, who trotted slowly around the snake keeping his eyes on the reptile's basilisk eyes of fire—a lo growling and the upturn-ing of his hair showing his fear and anger. The snake, seemed to have fairly fascinated the dog, the canine alked round and round the reptile, slowly coming nearer, but all the while growling as if knowing that danger - as near.

Brave Mrs. 3oker, seeing the life of her child at stake, picked up a pine knot and hurled it at the rattler, with rare good luck striking it on the head and knocking it away several feet. Rushing forward she picked up the child and ran to the house, iter husband came up at that moment and soon despatched the reptile, which measured eight feet long and, was as large around as an average man's arm at the shoulder, and sported sixteen rattles and a button. The dog barked loudly when the snake was knocked over, but did not offer to bite it, though generally furious at the right of one.
