Farming and Politics in Pender.

PINEY WOODS, N. C., Aug. 2, '88. DEAR REVIEW: - The old time custom of our farmers to annually assemble around the festive board after the crops are "laid by" and discuss farming, politics, good eating, tel presided, with Mr. J. G. Oldenbutsection of Pender county.

These are not sectarian meetings. No political or other influence control them. It is the spontaneous gathering of honest yeomanry, to compare notes on farming, brag on structed to send invitations to the day at the usual hours. big watermelons and other crops, tell amusing yarns, drink hard cider, in this State and South Carolina to laugh and grow fat.

Of course the young people come in for a share of the enjoyment. The a delighted zest to the array of fashion here and to "call the figures." Ah, what a delightful time. "Their feet beneath their petticoats, Like little mice steal in and out, And oh, they dance in such a way, No sun upon an Easter day Is half so fine a sight."

And these good people have much to rejoice over. For in this section H. J. Gerken. and all we can hear from, there is but one verdict, the best crops known in ten years.

Politics is being freely discussed now that the crops are "hilled up." Democracy in the county is stronger than ever, and everywhere we learn of a growing determination of redeeming Pender. The State and denbuttel, Martin Newman, E. G. National tickets will be strongly supported. In county politics the leading office of Sheriff is the absorbing theme. A fair interpretation of public sentiment, as we gather from this large assemblage from Greenwald. quite all over the county, seems to centre upon W. W. Larkins, Esq., as the candidate for Sheriff.

Public opinion is generally unerring, and this is so, because public interest is considered, and this or that man is adopted as an instru ment for public good. This is what we call the office seeking the man. From a happy combination of cir. cumstances for the Democratic party in Pender, it is generally conceded tournament and list of the prizes to that Mr. Larkins is the man for Sheriff.

It is a fair test the people have that if a man can successfully manage his own business he can that of has been a prosperous merchant at Long Creek and is justly popular throughout the county. He is a life-long Democrat, and is destined to be as potent a factor for good in his county as was his aged father, Col. W. S. Larkins, who is now closing a long life of usefulness for his fellow-man and country. He can give the bond, and the people want unsullied private and political life. PENDER.

Are you weak and weary, over your blood and give you strength.

At the Hummocks Yesterday.

Yesterday proved to be quite a lively day at the Hummocks. During the fore part of the day the vist itors there enjoyed themselves with sailing, fishing, bathing, strolling him for his availability and for his and chatting, but towards night the fun commenced. Just as the darkness began to gather a black cloud came up in the Northeast and al worked and tired? Hood's Sarsapa- most before one was aware of its ex rilla is just the medicine to purify istence a heavy squall swept over the place and made things lively for about ten or fifteen minutes, taking hats, parasols, umbrellas, and in fact everything of light weight with it. In two seconds (by Capt. Sasser's watch, of course) the air was filled with flying objects, some of them in human form flying after their head-gear. The storm soon blew over, however, without doing any damage, save in the interest of the hatters, as several hats were blown into the water, and everything became quiet again, except old ocean and the waiters at the hotel. But this quietude was short lived, for just as everybody had go seated at the supper table or engaged in conversation with somebody's sister or daughter, a most unearthly vell of "I've got him," rent the air and penetrated to the quiet repose of the sandfiddler and green lizard and brought all the occupants of the hotel to the front, causing hungry mortals to leave a square meal and sighing souls to forsake their fair companions. By this time Capt. Anthony Canova had reached the dining-room, coatless and hatless and shouting like a frightened Comanone, "We've caught him." There was a rush to the front of the hotel lots need cleaning. Keep on with the and as some of the ladies espied Mr. Cecil's white cap dodging around on the bridge they inquired if that was what had been caught, and if it was, get some one to shoot it. In the meantime, however, Mr. Cecil had secured help and was now able to tell the crowd that he had caught a shark, a real live shark, one of the man-eating species, an old shovel nose fellow. This somewhat calmed the excitement, and with the as sistance of four men and a boat, he succeeded in landing his sharkship on terra firma After killing him some one suggested that the shark be carried to the hotel and put on the piazza, where all could see him.

He was measured and proved to be

The first race of the newly formed Recreation Club came off yesterday at 6:45 o'clock, as announced. A the time drew near a dark bank o clouds rose in the northeast and seemed to threaten a heavy storm which no doubt deterred a great many persons from attending; but for all this, the river front near Market street dock was thronged with people, and many spectators were gathered at other points and watched the spirited contest, between rival crews, from start to finish, seemingly with the greatest enjoyment.

The course was from Market stree dock down the river to a buoy opposite Church street, thence up the river to a buoy opposite the New York steamer's wharf, thence down the river to the starting point. They held their positions well until the stake-boat opposite Church street was reached when the Leona with a spurt took the inside and came around on the upward turn just ahead of the Little Joe. From this point to the finish, the race was a hot one but the crew of the Leona not only held their own but increased their lead and came in ahead by several lengths.

The time was as follows: Leona, 10 minutes, 46 seconds; Little Joe, 11 minutes; Nettle, 11 minutes, 18 seconds. The course was a little over a

The spectators enjoyed the sport immensely, and greeted the winning boat with hearty cheers.

There will be another race by the Club, over the same course, on Thursday, Aug. 9th, at 6:30 p. m.
