Harper's Bazar.

ILLUSTRATED.

HARPER'S BAZAR will continue to maintain its reputation as the most useful family journal.
Its art illustrations are of the highest order, and its literature is of the choicest kind, and its Fashion and Household departments of the most interesting and extensive. Harper & Brothers will save its readers ten times the cost of the subscription, and its articles on decorative art, social etiquette, house-keeping, cookery, etc., make it indispensable to every household.
Its bright short stories and timely essays are among the best published; and not a week passes without the receipt of some of the most fascinating contents. Among the attractions of the new volume will be serial stories by Mrs. Frances Hodgson Burnett, Mrs.
Alexander, William Black and Thomas Hardy, and a series of papers on nursery management by Mrs. Christine Terhune Herrick.

The Daily Review.

Why?
Why did I ask "you" for a kiss?
Ah! you know as well as myself,
Or is there ignorance or bliss In rosy lips, you little elf?
Eyes may flash, cheeks may glow,
A matchless mouth may whisper
"Nay."
But tell-tale blushes plainly show Sweet knowledge of your mother's way.

The modest rose that like a gem Enthroned itself in your sweet face,
Was brighter than a diadem In fashioning and subtle grace—And yet you will not dare gaily say The logic of a lover's art, You rather like your mother's way When giving father all her heart.

The little token was denied However much I prized the fruit, And yet my heart has defied The girl on whom I pressed my sent.

Sometimes but when I will not say, Regretful tears may dim your eyes, Unless you fear to mother's ways Which angels practice in the skies.
—Henry E. Orr.

Why Coke Isn't a Society Man.

The social phase of public life, which so many find the chief delight of high station, is not a source of pleasure to Senator Coke. He does not feel at home at balls and receptions. Just prior to the President's New Year's reception, when it was the social event agitating Washington people, a brother Senator remarked to the Texan:
"Coke! I suppose you are going to the reception?"
"Well, I don't know," was the reply. "I haven't made up my mind."
"Oh, you ought to go," urged the Senator to Coke.
"Yes," said the latter, "I suppose I ought, but I hate these receptions, these crowds. I don't find room enough to get about, and am always in somebody's way or somebody's in my way. Now, the last time I was at one of the big receptions I got off in a corner where I thought I was out of the way. Pretty soon along came a lady dressed in style, with one of those dresses that sit tight and no top. She commenced to bow and smile at me, and though I didn't know her I bowed and smiled back. There she stood, bowing and smiling, and then I noticed she was pulling at her dress, that trailed all over the floor. I noticed a young fellow standing behind her and so I reached over and shaking him by the shoulder, said: 'Why don't you get off the lady's dress?' Well, she looked straight at my feet, and by George, I was standing on her dress myself."—St. Louis Globe

A Boy Who Became Famous.

It was a bright, warm day in the early summer of 1781, and London was full of overflowing when a boy about 11 years old, with long dark hair hanging down his neck and a strange, dreamy, far off kind of look in his eyes, came slowly along one of the busiest and most crowded streets of the great city, so wrapped up in his own thoughts that he hardly felt the jolts and bumps which he encountered in pressing his way through the hurrying throng around him.

He must have been thinking of a battle or a hard struggle of some kind, for every now and then he darted out both his arms in front of him, to the no small danger of the eyes or ribs of the passers by. Suddenly he was brought to a standstill, and no wonder, for in flourishing his hands about he had thrust one of them right into the coat pocket of a tall man who was just going past him.

"What! so young, and so wicked?" cried the man, turning around and seizing him. "You little rascal, do you want to pick my pocket in broad daylight?"

"No, I don't want to pick your pocket," said the boy, staring about him as if awakened from a dream.
"I thought I was swimming."

"Swimming!" echoed the man, with a broad laugh. "Well, I've heard a crowd called a sea of people, but I've never heard of anybody swimming in it before. You're either telling me a lie, or else you must be crazy."

"I'm not, indeed," protested the boy. "I was thinking of that man who swam across the Hellespont—Leander, you know—and it seemed to me as if I was swimming across it, too."

"Oh!" cried the stranger; "that's it, is it? You seem fond of reading, my friend?"

"I'd read all day long if I could," answered the boy, earnestly; "but I've only got a few books. I've read 'em all again and again."

"Well, I'll tell you what—I belong to a library, and if you like, I'll give you a ticket of admission to it for six months, and you can read as much as you please. Here's my address, and you can come for the ticket as soon as you like."

And the stranger, chuckling over his queer adventure, went briskly on, little thinking that he would live to see that boy honored by all England as one of her greatest poets, and would tell with pride to all his friends how he had once done a kindness to Samuel Taylor Coleridge.
