Convincing Proof.
In many instances it has been proven that B. B. B. (Botanic Blood Balm), made by the Blood Balm Co., Atlanta, Ga., will cure blood poison in its worst phases, even when all other treatments fail. A. P. Brunson, Atlanta, Ga., writes: "I had a running ulcer on one leg and on the other and felt greatly prostrated. I believe I actually swallowed a barrel of medicine in vain efforts to cure the disease. With little hope I finally acted on the urgent advice of a friend and got a bottle of B. B. B. I experienced a change, and my despondency was somewhat dispelled. I kept using it until I had taken sixteen bottles, and all the ulcers, rheumatism and all other horrors of blood poison have disappeared and at last I am sound and well again, after an experience of twenty years of torture." John Ward, Maxey, Ga., writes: "My disease was pronounced a tertiary form of blood poison. My face, head and shoulders were a mass of corruption, and finally the disease began eating my skull bones. My bones ached, my sinews were deranged, I lost flesh and strength, and life became a burden. All said I must surely die, but nevertheless, when I had used ten bottles of B. B. B. I was pronounced well. Hundreds of scars can now be seen on me. I have now been well over twelve months."

As announced the regattas are to be sailed on the first and third weeks in the three ensuing months, June, July and August.

Melons and Fruit.
It is said that the Georgia melon crop will be enormous next year and the Atlantic Coast Line people are laying their plans to handle it. Mr. Walters, Mr. Kenly, Capt. Divine and Mr. Emerson have just returned from the land of watermelons and Georgia melons where they have made arrangements to move the crop as fast as it comes in. There will be some of it along by the middle of June. The fruit crop in Georgia also promises to be enormous this year and will pay those who handle it.

Didn't Get The Eggs. Either. At least one of those who have been depredating on bird's nests has come to grief. It is bad enough to take the eggs from the birds on week days, but when a boy comes to grief for robbing a nest on Sunday it looks somewhat like a judgment. We sympathize with our young friend, however, in his sufferings and will not tell his name. He is a good boy in other matters but has a penchant for robbing birds' nests which it seems hard to overcome. He fell from a tree Sunday and broke his arm, a simple fracture, below the elbow, and will be laid up a week or ten days. He didn't get the eggs, either.

We've Got A Snake Story.
An old colored man, who lives a few miles from the city and who is said to be thoroughly reliable by those who know him, vouches for the following snake story. The old man has a son and this son begged his father some days ago to let him have an old decayed net which was on the place. The boy got the net and then fixed it in the creek to catch perch. He caught a few of those but one day on visiting his net found that an immense water rattlesnake had not only swallowed the fish it contained but the net itself, up to the cross bar on the end. He couldn't get the net out and couldn't get it down and so died then and there in that fix. The boy called his father who viewed the sight and then told this reliable snake story.

Faithful Unto Death.
The employees of this office were engaged yesterday in noticing the actions of two pigeons on the roof of Messrs. Burr & Bailey's foundry building, South of this office. One of these had evidently been sorely wounded, in some way, and its mate stopped with it. The uninjured bird would carefully assist the other along the roof, from time to time, so as to keep within the shadow of one of the chimneys. During all of the forenoon it remained faithfully at its post. In the afternoon the wounded bird died and it was affecting to note the distress of the other. It placed its bill to that of the dead bird and cooed and cooed, and cooed again, being evidently very reluctant to give up all hope. Finally, it seemed convinced of the fact that it was undoubtedly dead and then flew sorrowfully away.

American History.
The June Magazine of American History, with which its twenty first volume is completed, furnishes in its table of contents a vigorous illustration of its unmistakable wealth of resource, and its scope, which is as broad as the country itself. The number opens with a charming sketch of "The Historical Capital of Iowa," now the seat of the State University. The second contribution is an exhaustive and intensely interesting account of "The Ancient and Honorable Artillery Company of Massachusetts," the romantic story beginning with the first settlers of New England, and closing with the recent interchange of civilities between the Ancient and Honorable London and American Artillery companies, the two oldest military organizations in the world. Following these delightful papers, Georgia divides the honors of the number with Iowa and Massachusetts in an able article on "Georgia and the Constitution." "The Last Twelve Days of Major John Andre," unfolds a suggestive field of study, and is to be continued through two future issues of the magazine. "A Boston Writing School before the Revolution," gives a picturesque picture of men and scenes in that early period. No feature of the June number however will be likely to attract more attention than the "Evolution of the Constitution," which contains a volume of information in its few brief pages. "The Study of the Mental Life of Nations," a hymn, "The Washington Centennial," and three letters of Hon. Roger Griswold to his wife, are among the choice bits of reading which makes this particular number a welcome visitor. It is strong and substantial without a superfluous page. The several departments form a small compendium of history in themselves. Subscription price $5.00 a year. Published at 743 Broadway, New York.
