The Daily Review

A Country School. Pretty and pale and tired She sits in her stiff-backed chair. While the blazing summer sun Shines on her soft brown hair, And the tiny brook without, That she hears through the open

Mocks with its murmur cool Hard bench and dusty floor.

It seems such an endless round-

When from teacher to little Jem Not one of them cares a straw. Whether "John" is in any "case," Or Kansas in Omaha.

But Jemmy's bare brown feet Where the trout to his laring bait gleam;

And the teacher's blue eyes stray To the flowers on the desk hard by,

With a half unconscious sigh.

Her heart outrups the clock, As she smells their faint sweet scent: And when have time and heart

Their measure in unison bent? For time will haste or lag. Like your shadow on the grass,

That lingers far behind, Or flies when you fain would pass.

Have patience, restless Jem, The stream and fish will wait: And patience, tired blue eyes-Down the winding road by the gate,

Under the willow shade, Stands some one with fresher flow.

So turn to your books again, And keep love for the after hours. -Philadelphia Ledger.

The Projected Air Ship.

The consequences of a successful issue to the undertaking would be so momentous that they can with difficulty be realized. The first result would unquestionably be to put an end to wars. War is declared suddenly, after the Ger man manner, and the military trains which are said to stand ready pack ed, with the horses at hand for harnessing, in the German'arsenals, are set in motion. The transports, which lie equipped for sea, are filled with men from the nearest garrison, and in a few hours an immense force

In regard to passengers, the air ships, if they proved practicable at all, would offer such immense advantages in point of safety, speed and comfort that they would soon supersede all other conveyances for traveling distances. It seems to us that the proposed speed of 100 miles an hour would in practice be greatly exceeded. There would be no such obstacles to fast sailing in the air as are met with in ocean traveling, in the shape of waves, fogs and danger of collision. By keeping Are aching to wade in the stream, ships on the outward passage in the lower strata of the atmosphere and Shall leap with quick bright the inward bound ones in the upper strata, serious collisions would be ont of the question; and, provided the speed could be made to exceed Till her thoughts have followed her that of the air current as much as that of steamships exceeds that of the ocean currents, it is difficult to see what langer would remain of which travelers by well built and well managed air ships need be afraid.
