Contagious Blood Diseases.

Itch, sores, pimples, Itch, salt rheum, eruptions of contagious blood disease, is a manly duty to eradicate blood from the system by a use of B. B. B. (Bleached Drawings) Blood Balm, thus enabling the sore to heal, and thereby removing all possibility of other members of the family being likewise afflicted. Send to Blood Balm Co., Atlanta, Ga., for book that will convince. E. Outlaw, Mt. Olive, N. C., writes: "I had itching sores on my shoulders and arms. After using B. B. B. I am cured entirely." Johnson, Belmont Station, Miss., writes: "B. B. B. has worked on me like a charm. My head and body was covered with sores, and my hair came out, but B. B. B. healed me." W. J. Kinnin, Hutchins, Texas, writes: "B. B. B. has cured my wife of a large ulcer on her leg that doctors and all other medicine failed to cure." J. A. Hossman, a prominent merchant of New York, Ga., writes: "I know of several cases of blood disease speedily cured by B. B. B. The bottles cured a lady of ugly scrofulous sores." G. C. Birchmore & Co., Maxey, Ga., writes: "B. B. B. in curing Mr. Robert Ward of blood disease effected one of the most wonderful cures that ever came to our knowledge."

Lippincott's Magazine.

The complete novel in Lippincott's for November is called "Creole and Puritan," and is by T. C. De Leon, author of "Cross Purposes," "The Rook or the Rye," etc., etc. In this, his last romance, Mr. De Leon has surpassed himself, and has painted a charming and graphic picture of West Point life, upon both its practical and social side. The characters of two young men, one an impulsive Creole, the other a cool-headed New Englander, are brought into fine contrast. There is a capital description of a carnival, and also of an international horse race. Nothing in recent fiction since the famous chariot race in "Ben Hur" can compare with the wonderfully realistic description of the latter exciting event. The scene of the story drifts to Egypt, and here Mr. De Leon shows himself as much at home as at West Point or New Orleans. The heroine of the romance is a lovely character, but contrasted with her is a wily, beautiful woman, who manages to do much mischief. The tale is brought to a close in New York City, where many tangled threads are unravelled, and an unexpected though just denouement takes place.

Forecast.

For North Carolina, fair and slightly cooler. For Wilmington and vicinity, fair weather.

Refreshing and Invigorating Delicious Soda Water as drawn from Munds Brothers' magnificent new soda fountain at a temperature of 32°. Purest Fruit Syrup, Milk Shakes and Natural Mineral Water.

The Robeson County Swamp Angels.

We find in the Charleston News and Courier, copied from the Macon Telegraph, what purports to be an account of Henry Berry Lowrey and his band of Robeson county "Swamp Angels." The account takes up a column and a quarter of solid type in the News and Courier and in all of that space there is scarcely one word of truth. The Munchausen who indited it (it is dated at Washington City) ascribes the origin of the gang to a sailor from a Portuguese vessel wrecked on the coast some 25 years previous to the late war. He found his way into Robeson county and married a "Creole woman, with a trace of colored blood in her veins." The result of this marriage was "a half dozen stalwart sons and several daughters." Henry Berry Lowrey was the oldest of these. They were conscripted by a body of home guard during the war but escaped and hid and as old Lowrey refused to reveal their hiding place he and his wife were both shot dead on their own threshold. Then the whole family swore a vendetta against the whites, the girls, who were all "magnificent brunettes," as well as the boys. The result of this was the feud which followed the war. The Lowreys were all, of course, "intense Unionists." Their vengeance seems to have been principally directed against the McLeans, McNeils and McClearys, of Robeson county. In all "a score or more" of the families of the offenders were killed. Rhoda Lowrey, Henry Berry's handsome wife, was once arrested and lodged in jail at Lumberton, but H. B. sent word that if she was not released he would burn the town. Thereupon the affrighted citizens got a carriage and put her in and sent her back to her husband. Henry Berry was himself once an inmate of the jail at Wilmington, whence he escaped and returned to his native heath "in and around Scrabbletown" where the devil broke loose again and many more murders were committed. The veracious author of the tale was informed by some one who paid a visit to H. B. while in jail here that "he was a man of 30 odd years, tall and splendidly proportioned, herculean even, with a dark Spanish face and an expression of command and fearlessness."

At one time "the Lowreys, armed to their teeth, would ride the high ways of Robeson, dash through the streets of Lumberton &c." Sometimes, too, "a swamp angel would calmly board a train and ride for miles with a sheriff who he knew had a warrant for his arrest, would stop the ears in a piece of woods, and would get off." Finally, he says that "Henry Berry Lowrey escaped, and with several of his followers, was supposed to have joined his future with the James boys."

This is a mere outline of as ridiculous a pack of lies as was ever strung together and palmed off for facts on the confiding public. Henry Berry Lowrey was not a Portuguese but his progenitors were here before a white man had ever set foot on the soil of America. He was one of the tribe of Croatan Indians who removed inland from the coast hundreds of years ago and which Hamilton McMillan claims, with much reason, to have been incorporated among the lost colonists of Roanoke. His ancestors fought the British in the "rebellion" of 1776. There wasn't a drop of negro blood in his veins. The tribe at one time themselves owned negro slaves and the negro has never with them had any social privileges. They were not Union men during the late war but strong for the South. Col. John J. Hedrick, of this city, has had them at the battlements of Fort Holmes, with arms in their hands, ready to fight to the death for the Southern cause. They did not swear a vendetta against the whites because of the murder of their father and mother. There is no such place as Scrabbletown anywhere in Robeson county. The outlaws, who formed but a small part of the tribe, didn't own a horse between them; they didn't ride on public roads and were never known to gallop through the streets of Lumberton; they were never known to board a railroad train and but seldom did they approach a station. Rhoda Lowrey was a very handsome woman and Henry Berry was very jealous of her but Rhoda was never outlawed; she was never captured and carried to jail at Lumberton and was therefore never released from jail and sent home in a carriage. Likewise, as Henry Berry Lowrey was never in jail in Wilmington it stands to reason that he never escaped thence, nor was he ever interviewed while there. The description of him was ridiculous. We have seen him and he would not have answered the description in any respect, save the long, black hair. Finally, Henry Berry Lowrey could never have joined Jesse James' gang because he was as dead as Julius Caesar long before the gang was ever heard of. He was found dead and fully identified, with his empty gun by his side. Whether he killed himself or was accidentally killed will never be known.

The Croatans are to day honest reliable, hard-working citizens of Robeson county. They have their own schools and their own churches and they cast two hundred votes for Cleveland and Fowle in 1888.

The Macon Telegraph ought to sift the truth in its correspondent's article, wrap it up carefully in cotton batting and then enclose it in a mustard seed for preservation.

"Too Young to Die."

We greatly regret to hear of the death of Mrs. Margaret Holliday, wife of our townsman, Mr. W. W. Holliday, of the A. C. Line, and daughter of Mr. George W. Collins. She breathed her last about 12 o'clock to-day. She was one of the most lovely and accomplished ladies in the city and her early death is most deeply deplored.

SEE THIS!

THE MOUNTAINS AND THE SEASHORE—ASHE AND BUNCOMBE AND BRUNSWICK, SAMPSON, DUPLIN AND ONSLOW ALL COMBINE TO FEED WILMINGTON.

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN:

I propose to tell you a plain, unvarnished tale. I bought to-day 72 HEAD OF CATTLE—and paid for them. Of these 30 are from Ashe and Buncombe and are clover fed. They are not ordinary Beef Cattle prepared for market but are a special lot. They were bought by Mr. G. B. Austin, who is one of the best judges of Beef Cattle in the State.

I pledge my reputation that they are the BEST BEEF CATTLE seen here in at least a twelve-month. They weigh from 600 to 1,200 pounds each and are as fat as they can hold. The Beef from our Eastern counties is not quite so fat as this but it is equally tender and well fed. Some of all of these Meats will be found on sale on my Stalls to-morrow [Friday] and Saturday.

Now, Ladies and Gentlemen, help me and I will help you. I will keep these Meats on sale all of the FALL, WINTER and SPRING, and I promise you THE BEST ALWAYS.

This will do for to-day. Next week I will have more to say. In the meantime [and the Meat time] call and see the BEAUTIFUL BEEF I will offer every day. Respectfully,

JNO. F. GARRELL,

Stalls 1 and 2, Front Street Market, South side. sep 13 3t
