The Daily Review.

Beyond Words.

Little maid in homespun gown,
Simple as the daisies,
Loving lips and eyes of brown—
Let me sing your praises.

Shall I call my love a flower
Gathered to my bosom?
No; they fade from hour to hour,
And I want my blossom.

Shall I call her precious pearl?
Set not jewels nigh her!
Only just a country girl,
Yet no king could buy her.

Shall I call her angel blest,
Whitest soul of women?
Stay! I think I like her best
Laughing, weeping, human.

Is she, then, a sparkling star
Sent to guide and cheer me?
Ah! the skies are cold and far,
And I like her near me.

Not a name is there on earth
Of a poet's giving
Fit to tell one-half her worth,
Real; true and living.

Rhymes and words of mystery
Only would amaze her,
For her own sweet self is she,
And all my deeds shall praise her.

Mrs. Michael Curtin, Plainfield, Ill., makes the statement that she caught cold, which settled on her lungs; she was treated for a month by her family physician, but grew worse. He told her she was a hopeless victim of consumption and that no medicine could cure her. Her druggist suggested Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption; she bought a bottle and to her delight found herself benefited from first dose. She continued its use and after taking ten bottles, found herself sound and well, now does her own household and is as well as she ever was. Free trial bottles of this great Discovery at R. R. Ingenious Mode of Checking Fire.

An old story is being resurrected against a usually quiet but somewhat excitable resident of the suburbs. It is alleged that the gentleman in question discovered that a fire had been started in the attic of his house, through the heat of one of the chimneys. With rare presence of mind he rushed down stairs and seized a milk picher from the kitchen table, rushed out to the cistern, threw the milk out of the picher, pumped some water into it, and rushed up stairs, only to find that his wife had seized a large picher of water from one of the bedrooms in the upper story and extinguished the incipient conflagration. As there were four large ewers of water on the two upper stories, the progress of mental reasoning which induced the excited resident to make such a ferocious onslaught on the milk picher would be extremely interesting to trace, if such a thing were possible. It should have the presence of mind possessed by another house owner, who discovered that a spark from a neighboring conflagration had lit upon the slightly slanting roof of his house, and had set fire to the shingles. All the buckets and tubs and pichers had gone for use in the big fire, and there was no one to send over to bring them back. But the owner of the house, even in that moment of peril, kept cool-headed. He rushed to the pond, which stood by the house, and deliberately sat down in the water. To race up stairs and out upon the roof was the work of a moment, and then he "sat on" the fire, in more senses than one! He saved the house.—Boston Advertiser.
