The story also current is that Mr. Reed's views on religious matters before he graduated became so widely divergent from those supposed to be held by the clergymen of the 26 and 27. Congregational denomination that all hope of making a preacher of him was given up. If Reed had gone into the ministry, there would have been a revolution in less than a year. He would have overturned all precedent, made new rules for the Church, shelved the Ten Com- 24 and 25, mandments, and assumed a general dictatorship in short order.

> The friends of the direct tax bill, says the Washington Post, are beginning to show anxiety in regard to it. It was the popular opinion that it would have a safe and easy passage through legislative channels, but it appears now to be stuck somewhere. Six weeks ago it went tion. through the Senate without difficulty, and has been on the House calendar for nearly a month. The majority and minority reports are ready and in the hands, respectively, of Representatives Caswell and Oates. The former is exceedingly auxious to call it up, but it is hinted and all painful affections. For sale that Mr. Cannon and the economists on the Republican side of the House, who are interested in preventing a treasury deficit, have an anchor fastened to it that will keep it right where it is for some time to come. Speaker Reed is suspected of being in sympathy with the economists on this issue, and it is the suspicion that creates the deep anxiety on the part of the friends of the bill.

The ballot reform bill, which has been reported to the New Jersey Senate by a majority of the committee having the subject in charge, provides for an absolutely secret ballot, with no marking of the tickets. There are separate tickets for each party. The voters enters the booth and is handed one of the ballots of each political party, printed at public expense, and shuts himself in, 100 feet from any other person. Ballots are distributed ten days ahead of election, but none of these can be used in the booths. Registration all over the State is provided for. A State board appoints county boards of registration, composed of four men appoints ted by the Governor, strictly nonpartisan. The chairman of the State committees designate the men from their respective parties. These boards canvass the counties and find the legal voters, as census enumerators get the population.
