

War Eagle's Stony Glare. There is great excitement among the Kickapoos over the discovery of a petrified body supposed to be that of War Eagle, a leading chief of the tribe who died many years ago, shortly after the tribe's return from Old Mexico. Instead of the remains being deposited in the ground in a coffin they were placed in an upright position in a large hollow tree; there to await the coming of the happy hunting days, as the Indians believe. During the rage of a fierce forest fire the trunk of the tree was consumed by the flames. A party of Indians who were passing through the woods stopped to light their pipes, when the image of an Indian warrior, with tomahawk in hand, was discovered underneath the ashes of the burning tree.

The scene which followed is described as being most remarkable. The Indians were scared so badly that they lost all self control and a regular panic ensued. the Indians rushing madly through the woods and yelling at the top of their able to oversee the work on my farm. voices. As soon as word could be communicated to the remaining members of the tribe, some 200 in number, a hurried consultation was held, at which it was decided that the reservation should be immediately abandoned.

Luckily some of the more civilized members of the tribe had influence enough to allay the feeling of fear, and the plan of desertion was not carried out. The place of fright was visited later in the day, when sure enough the petrified body of War Eagle was exhumed and placed upon exhibition.

The petrification was perfect. The war costume was as natural as life, there being a perfect imprint on the stone of both gun and tomahawk, which were buried alongside the body. The peculiar formation of stone presents an imposing appearance, and, but for the occasional creases caused by insects, would be clear of any imperfections.

A large, hollow oak was selected, the top sawed off about fourteen feet from the ground, and the petrified body placed upright therein, to remain forever. A two inch pine slab bearing the following inscription marks the petrified remains of this tribe's greatest warrior: "War Eagle, great fighter, turned into rock. Indians afraid Great Spirit. Let him sleep on his beauty forever."-Cor. St. Louis Globe Democrat.

Austria's Imperial Wedding.

The forthcoming imperial wedding has restored a little life to the Austrian court, which has been miserably dull since Prince Rudolph's tragic death. Although the marriage of the Archduchess Valerie with the Archduke Franz Salvator on July 31 is to be solemnized privately at Ischl on account of the empress' delicate health, the event will be kept throughout the empire with considerable festivity. Many towns are founding charitable institutions in the young princess' honor, as she prefers such useful remen brances to costly gifts of jewelry. On the 16th the bride elect renounced all her rights to the crown, according to the rule for Austrian archduchesses about to be married. Part of her trousseau and many wedding presents have been exhibited at the Vienna hofburg, and the dresses will be shown ion if they will send me their ex during the next few weeks. All the clothes are of Austrian manufacture, and very simple, though exquisitely made. The princess and her fiance have now accompanied the empress on a pilgrimage to the famous shrine of Mariazell, to fulfil a promise made to the empress' dying sister, the princess of Thurn and Taxis .- London Illustrated News.

An Old Building Doomed.

Many interesting memories cluster about the buildings known as the Hygienic hotel, at 13 and 15 Laight street, New York city, now doomed to be torn down to give place to an immense woolen warehouse. The buildings were originally erected for residences for the families of George Schuyler and a son of Alexander Hamilton and Col. Thorne, in what was then the fashionable quarter of the city about seventy years ago, in the vicinity of St. John's park. The carriage houses of the high toned old families stood until recently on the back of the property. The queer old stone trimmings of the windows and doorways, and its mahogany folding doors, its elaborate white marble jambs and the generously large rooms, were reminders of the time when land was much less val-PENNYROYAL PILLS uable than it is now, when flats were unknown and the hum of business had not reached as far up town as Canal street.-New York Sun.

· Profit in Soda Water. The druggists who sells soda water for five cents claim that there is no great profit in it because ice is so dear, and people are demanding everything but a square meal. They make about three cents a glass on the plain soda with the old fashioned syrups. The first soda fountain ever put up only had four syrups-lemon, vanilla, sarsaparilla and coffee-and they are the most popular Witticus, entering the fruiterer "Whatcher talkin' about? I don know nothin' about no such pe son." "Then you should not a vertise that you keep a good supp of dates."-Bazar.

Advice to Mothers.

MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP should always be used when children are cutting teeth. It relieves the little sufferer at once; it produces natural, quiet sleep by relieving the cnild from pain, and the little cher-ub awakes as "bright as button." It is very pleasant to taste. It soothes the child, softens the gums, allays all pain, relieves wind, regulates the bowels, and is the best known remely for diarrhoa, whether arising from teething or other causes. I wenty five cents a bottle. july 6 deod&w1v
