The guard pursued the prisoner and fired twice, but failed to stop Walker, who made his escape into a swamp, where it is supposed he concealed himself. Mr. King, the superintendent, made diligent search for the man but failed to find him. Walker was shackled and it is supposed that he had in some way obtained a file with which he managed to cut the chain connected with the irons on each leg. He was serving a twelve months' term for assault with a deadly
