The Boys Go Armed.

It is but a short time ago that a proessor in one of the leading colleges of San Francisco slapped the face of a rich bank-er who had published a long and bitter attack upon his (the professor's) venerable father, a divine of great eminence and fame. The professor was at once shot down, although he was entirely unarmed, and had informed his adversary of the fact. Yet the jury declared that it was a case of justifiable homicide, and the accused left the court without a stain on his character.

Even the children, aping their elders, carry pistols and knives with the utmost nonchalance, and a few weeks ago, when the principal of one of the public schools had occasion to administer some much needed corporal punishment to a lad of 12, the young rascal drew a huge revolver on the head master, and the servfces of the chief of police had to be called in for the purpose of disarming him.

At the request of the terrified principal the police subjected all the pupils present to a personal search and examination, with the result that thirty-five revolvers of all sizes, from the "Colt navy revolver" to the "22 caliber popgun," besides a dozen knives of murderous appearance, were seized and confiscated .-St. Louis Post Dispatch.

What Dudes Can Do.

Young John Jacob Astor, the greatest match in America, is down here, and is going around under the chaperonage of that social Wellington, Mrs. Paran Stevens. He is generally reported to be a nice boy, with that strong vein of, good sense that characterizes most of his family. But these young gentlemen, brought up on Pinard's suppers and Klunder's flowers, have a good deal of American grit in them after all. One night last week a small sloop went ashore on the rocks at the foot of the cliff. Although the wind was blowing half a gale, and dinners were in progress at several of the cliff cottages, a flock of young fellows in evening dress appeared and worked like Trojans getting people ashore. That seems to be the way with the gilded youth everywhere. Under the varnish of affectation and imitation comes the real stuff-manliness and courage. -Newport Cor. Boston Transcript.

A Bit of Midsummer Madness.

It has been charged upon the sister republics south of us that they are unduly given to the bloody delights of civil and internal warfare. This seems to be the characteristic of all the American nationalities without exception, with the great republic at the head of the list. A passion for internecine war has become the common heritage of all the American republics. It was once thought that this vice was confined to the tropics, but the bloody infection has seized upon the people from the frozen promontory of Cape Horn to the white belt of the Canadian snows, and civil war will soon become as characteristic of the people of our north temperate zone as of those who live under the vertical sun of the equator. The United States is not likely to shine as an arbitrator and pacificator of the internal or international troubles of its weaker neighbor republics.-New Orleans Picayune.

The other day he turned up at Greenwich searching for his wife. He had been picked up by a Portuguese vessel and carried to South America, where he had been forced to become a pirate. He was engaged in blockade running during the American civil war, and had since been to the gold fields, where he had made his fortune. His wife, who had married again and was the mother of a large family, recognized him instantly. Like his prototype, the laureate's Enoch Arden, he was de-

The new masonic temple in Chicago is to have eighteen stories, and the roof will be 240 feet from the pavement. The ground dimensions will be 170 by 114 feet. The structure will be built principally of steel. What the exterior facing will be is not yet decided. It may be terra cotta, stone or special brick made for this particular building. In any case the exterior will be but a fire proofing, not bearing any part of the weight of the building.—Philadelphia Ledger.

According to Professor E. James, colored, the earth has but a little more than a twelvementh to stand. Professor James is a chiropodist with an international reputation.
