Emigration Commissioner Valentine, of Vermout, is much pleased with the Swedes who have settled in that State. They have been more than self-supporting since they came to Vermont. Fifty-five men, women and children came last April, and the money earned among them has not only supported their families, but they have with their earnings spent over $400 in the purchase of tickets to send to Sweden to friends. Upwards of twenty have already arrived or are on their way here. The addition of twenty to the original fifty-five makes quite a ratio of increase for six months. The idea of calling these self-reliant, self-sustaining, self-respecting, independent. thrifty people paupers Mr. Valentine pronounces absurd.

The Philadelphia Press correspondent repeats the familiar story that many prominent New Yorkers began life in a very small way. The house of Lord & Taylor began in a diminutive store down town; Edward Ridley began business with less than $1,000; S. V. White was a farmer and teacher; Jim Keene was a laborer in mines; Russell Sage was a grocery clerk in Troy; Commodore Bateman was a treasury clerk in Washington, on a salary of $1,000; Jay Gould, as everybody knows, was a book canvasser; William R. Grace was a runaway lad; John Jay Knox was a farmer's boy; Thomas L. James was a typesetter; John Thompson, Ex President of the Chase Bank, one of the founders of the national banking system, was an office boy at $3 a week salary; Mr. St. John was a poor boy from the South; Commodore Van Santvoord, the head of the Hudson river line of steamboats, was a freight clerk at $50 a month; and so on.

The old adage "look for the woman" whenever a serious complication arises receives a striking confirmation in the revelations concerning Boulanger. The sinews of war, it is now ascertained, were furnished the French agitator by the Duchess d'Uzes, whose motive seems to have been to make him the instrument of restoring the French monarchy, with the Comte de Paris, who is about to visit this country, as King. She intended that Boulanof the very best writers of the Southern Pres-byterian Church.
