A Strange Wager in Vienna. A curious wager is at present occupying the attention of such widely sepa-rated classes as our young noblemen and the Association of Hotel and Restaurant Waiters in Vienna. Several of the younger scious of the highest Austrian aristocracy, who were accustomed to dine in an old hotel of high repute in the Karnthner strasse, took exception to the practice of the waiters, most of whom have seen twenty or thirty years' service, in dressing their mustaches in just the same fashion as the "noble swells" they had to serve. One of the high born customers accordingly laid a wager with, some of his friends, which was immediately accepted, that within a given time | Keep thou thy vigil! in the ways the objectionable adornment should disappear from the upper lips of the waiters in all the fashionable hotels and restaurants in Vienna, otherwise the proposer himself was to shave off his own embellishment for a given period.

In order to effect his purpose the latter commenced by trying to persuade the hotel keeper in the Karnthner strasse to forbid all his servants wearing mustaches on penalty of losing his aristocratic customers. In this case he succeeded, but the waiters, who were mostly married men, one after another gave notice to leave their places. They were at once replaced by younger men, who for a consideration submitted to the imposed humiliation. The same thing hap only a short time; she weighed less pened in a number of other hotels and restaurants, and the wager was nearly won by the layer when the proprietor of the Hotel Imperial, the first hotel in Vienna, flatly refused to comply with the whim of the Vienna jennesse doree, whom he told outright that if they deserted his house he should readily find better customers.

The case was also taken up, "as matter of right and honor," by the Association of Waiters, which threatened to expel from the society any member degrading himself by humoring aristocratic caprice in this matter. Thus the matter stands at the present moment. The bet appears likely to be lost, and then will gie?" come the triumph of the waiters, who perin'." expect soon to have the satisfaction of seeing their would be dictator instead of gram'ma, see what I can do. I can themselves going about with shaven lip. -Cor. London Standard.

One on Mr. Depew. They say that when Mr. Depew came ently from Europe the usual swarm of yarn spinners gathered nightly in the smoking room to tell stories and chat about things in general. Every soul save one in the party kept his end up. er. "The cats and dogs. Papa said The exceptional member of the party it was rainin'em.'-Harper's Young did not laugh or indicate by even a twinkle of the eyes any interest in the funniest jokes, and was as silent as a door knob at the best stories. This conduct began to nettle Mr. Depew and the he's the ticket seller down at the other spirits, and when the final seance came around they had lost all patience with the reticent and unresponsive stranger. Mr. Depew was selected to bring him to terms. They were all comfortably seated and in came the stranger. "See here, my dear sir," said Mr. Depew, "won't you tell a story?" "I never told one in my life." "Sing a song?" "Can't sing." "Know any jokes?" persisted Mr. Depew. "No." Mr. Depew and all were prepared to give it up when the stranger stammered and hesitated, and finally made it known that he knew just one conundrum. "Give it to us, said Mr. Depew and the others in chorus "What is the difference between a turkey and me?" solemnly asked the stranger. "Give it up," said Chairman Depew. "The difference between a turkey and me," mildly said the stranger, "is that they usually stuff the bird with chestnuts after death. I am alive."-Illustrated American.

Double Cabbed Engines.

At the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western Railroad company's shops at Utica eighty men, mostly skilled mechanics, are employed. At the present time they are working on a peculiar locomotive known as the culm burner. The engine is queerly shaped, having two cabs, one for the engineer and one for the fireman. Under the boiler and firebox the machine has six large driving wheels. The weight of these great mogul engines is between thirty-five and sixty tons each. They are made to haul heavy freight trains. The machinery is so arranged that the steam is never exhausted. They are valuable also for the reason that their fuel is the refuse coal from the mines, which could not otherwise be used without a great loss .- Albany Argus.

A Queer Mark Going. A historical curiosity of the oldest railway in Germany is about to be relegated to oblivion. When the Nurnberg-Furth line, the first railway on German soil, replaced the old Thurn and Taxis vellow post, a yellow stripe was painted on every car, and for fifty-five years it has remained a unique reminder of the ante-railway age. The Bavarian government, however, has just ordered that this stripe be painted out, in order that University of North Carolina the Nurnberg-Furth cars may conform in appearance with all other railway cars in Bavaria. -Berlin Letter.
