They can be made to char and contain twenty cords; and in regard to durability, the flues being the only part exposed to the fire, and they being built of thick boiler iron, have been pronounced by experienced judges, to last more than two years, as they are exposed to the heat but a few hours each day. The Whig Nominations. The nomination of Gen. Winfield Scott for President by the Whig National Convention, reached this city by telegraph, yesterday at noon. The announcement caused considerable excitement, as it was unexpected, and certainly unwelcome news to our citizens of all parties. The Whigs, who had looked with confidence for the nomination of Mr. Fillmore or Webster, were generally deeply chagrined at the result, and in many instances in our hearing, frankly declared their unquailified disapproval of the action of the convention. The Democrats were, perhaps, as much surprised as the Whigs, and we doubt not that the nomination of either of the other gentlemen named would have been more satisfactory to them; for though they speak confidently of the ability of their party to elect their candidates, against any nominees on the other side, we doubt not that most of them regard Gen. Scott as the most available man the Whigs could have presented to the great Northern and Western States. Past experience has proven to us the potency of military renown, in an appeal to the popular suffrage, and the wisest politicians are unable to compute correctly the strength of the hero of many wars, great and small, it that section of the Union where his anti-slavery a!liances commend him to popular favor. It has been the boast of the N. Y. Tribune, the organ of the Seward faction, that the north and west could elect Gen. Scott without the aid of the Whigs of the South. The boast was not made without a careful estimate of his strength, and no one will doubt, who knows the views/ opinions, and aims of the editor and his fanatical fac tion, that such a victory would be preferred by the to a triumph upon Whig principles with the Natio Whig party. In view of the strong and determined opposition to Scott in the Convention from the South, and relying as they do upon the strength of the large free States, it is to be feared that the canvass will be conducted at the North upon sectional grounds. If the contest should assume this character, with General Scott's military prestige aided by the consummate tact of the arch-demagogue Seward, it is easy to foresee that the result would be at least doubtful. Any division of Southern strength in his favor would most probably insure his election, and the triumph of the faction by which he has been forced upon the National Whig party. Gen. Scott has, it is true, declared his acquiescence in the Compromise Platform of the Convention, a Platform which, faithfully adhered to, would be satisfac-Sw. Spts. Nitre; Aq. Scott's Northern-friends that they will consider no Platform recognizing the Fugitive Slave Law as binding upon them, we apprehend it will be difficult so to assure and establish the confidence of the Southern wing of the party, as to secure their cordial support to the Seward and Greet

In a word, the nomination of Gen. Scott by the Baltimore Convention, is, under the circumstances, cannot receive the hearty support of any party in Georgia. In the present state of feeling we are confident that the nomination of a third Presidential ticket, by the Union Whig Delegates at Baltimore, would be promptly responded to by the Whigs of this State. most of whom, with the true Union Whigs of the North, would prefer defeat with Fillmore or Webster, as national men, to victory with Scott as a sectional chief. We shall not be surprised to see a movement for a third Presidential ticket in Georgia, which, while it would defeat the designs of mere sectional men. would preserve the nationality of the Whig party of the Union, an event of the highest importance in the estimation of all who regard the nationality of the two great parties as essential to the perpetuity of the Re-

"Take six pounds of sugar to one peck (or sixteen pounds) of the fruit, scald and remove the skin of the fruit in the usual way, cook them over a fire, their own juice being sufficient without the addition of water, until the sugar penetrates, and they are clarified; they are then shaken out, spread on dishes, flattened, and dried in the sun. A small quantity of the syrup should be occasionally sprinkled over them whilst drying, after which pack them down in boxes, treating each layer with powdered sugar. The syrup is afterwards concentrated and bottled for use. They keep well from year to year, and retain their flavor surprisingly, which is nearly that of the best quality of fresh figs. The pear-shaped or single tomatoes answer the purpose best. Ordinary brown sugar may be used, a large portion of
