Ruffies vs. Rage.

What a blessing it is for a rogue to have some standing" in society! We have seen a man sentenced to three years imprisonment for stealing a half barrel of sugar. True it was a second offence, and was law. But then he wore a ragged coat, and his face were a rougher hue than the lily fingered gentry around him? Nobody, of course. "Shut up the loafer ; who cares for him?" is the language and feeling of all " respectable people." We have seen care-worn faces confined to prison for an equal length of time, for offences scarcely greater, and where we knew that want had driven to madness and desperation. Society, especially "respectable penple," (that means rich, now-adays, you know,) said, served 'um right," and piety and philanthropy

A short time since. a man stole some $90,000 from the Suffolk Bank in Boston-stole it genteelly; and he was called a "defaulter." He was not a thief; oh! no, not he. He was a defaulting bank officer.
Able counsel sided him in his defence. He was tried amidst a group of sympathising friends, and hundreds prayed, as does the mockery of an old indictment: "May the good Lord send you a safe deliverance." He wore fine clothes. Then he had done up the thing on a magnificent scale, too. This is why he had friends around him, and was not called a thief. This gigantic default made his sin white as snow in the eyes of his friends.

Well, this man-Mr. Brewer was his name-was the other day in Boston, found guilty, and sentenced to one day's solitary confinement, and three years in the State Prison! The humane judge expressed much sympathy and regret at being obliged to sentence him so long. If he had made his whole property safe, he gets $30,000 a year for his services to the State. Whether he has done this or not, he will be respected when he comes out, and perhaps be pardoned before his time is out.

Suppose a man had stolen a horse with a hundred dollars: would be have been sentenced to less than three years? The probability is, he would have received six years, if he was a poor man, and was not able to wear a fine coat. What encouragement there is for honesty among the children of ignorance and want, when they see men who get good salaries stealing their 100,000 at a time, and receiving a less sentence than those who steal $100 to save them-

The Food of Man.

Bayard Taylor now traveling in Africa, presents a very different opinion upon the vegetable and meateating natives from that which vegetarians promul-

"The scenery of the Nile, southward from Shendy, is again changed. The tropical rains, which fall occasionally at Abou Hammed and scantily at Berber, are here periodical, and there is no longer the same striking contrast between desert and garden land. The plains, extending inward from the river, are covered with a growth of bushes and coarse grass, which also appears in patches on the side of the mountains. The inhabitants cultivate but a narrow strip of beans and dourra along the river, but own immense flocks of sheep and goats, which afford their principal sustenance I noticed a new kind of grain called 'dookhu,' of which they plant a larger quantity than of dourra. It is a germinaceous plant, somewhat resembling "timothy grass," but with a larger head and heavier seeds. They make from it a coarse, black bread, which they say is more nutritious than wheat. Mutton. however, is the Ethiopian's greatest delicacy. Notwithstanding this is TEAS.—TEAS. A full supply of choice Green and Black Teas, constantly on hand and for sale in quantities to it, by L. N. BARLOW, Granite Row, Front-st. prefer it to vegetable food. The sailors and cameldrivers, whose principal food is dourra, are, notwithstanding a certain quality of endurance, as weak as children, when compared with an ablebodied European; and they universally attribute this weakness to their diet. This is a fact for lank Sylvester Graham to explain. My experience coincides with that of the Ethiopians, and I ascribe no small share of my personal health and strength, which the violent alternations of heat and cold have not shaken in the least, to the fact of my having fared sumptuously every day. If I had adopted a diet of rice and water. or bran and turnips, I should not be here to give this testimony."

Set a Good Example.

Nothing is so easy done as to preach and talk of obligations which we are under to do justly and walk humbly; but it is altogether a different matter to write, and preach, and talk simply by example. And yet, though the former be useful, how much more valuable and effective is the latter? What are those most beautiful essays on the cardinal virtues, compared with the excellence of the life in which these virtues have a living and vital existence? It was not alone the doctrines advanced with such dignified and persuasive eloquence, by our Saviour Jesus Christ, nor the wonderful miracles performed by him, which made the hearts of men follow after him, these were rendered doubly effectual by the example which he set at all times, even under the most trying circumstances. And so it is now, in an humble sense, by mere human hopes. Men may preach and the world will listen, but profit comes by example. A parent, for instance, inculcates gentleness to his children by many sound precepts, but they see him treat his beast in a rude and angry manner, and, in conseuty marshals in the arrest of the man " Jerry," at Syr. | quence. his instructions are worse than lost, for they acuse. N Y., as a fugitive slave, the trial came on in are neither heeded or respected. His example, as a the Circuit Court on Monday last, the charge being for gentle and humane man, would have been sufficient for his children, without one word of command .-Men are just like children in this respect, and imitate a good example, while mere words, no matter how good and true, without such example, will pass into one ear and out at the other.

> Transplanting in Dry Weather, or "Grouting." Many people, in "waiting for a rainy day," defer transplanting so long that it is impossible for the plant to arrive at full maturity and perfection in the proper season, and as the chief value of many vegetables depends upon their being early and seasonable,
