Sun of Friday : In passing down Spruce street, his attention was suddenly arrested by a person running behind a young man passing down the street, and se zing him by the shoulder in a violent manner, uttering at the same time a coarse oath. " Didn't I pay for the watch ?" said the young man to his rough assailant. The other swore and kept his hold, demanding the delivery of the watch. Several persons collected to see what was the matter, and a sharp little newsboy who was about, slyly intimated that the violent individual was a "Peter the latter, which is a sequel to the first, we are now engaged Funk." The bystanders interferred, and accompain reading ; and we must confess that we have rurely been nied the young man back to the mock auction shop securing the company of a Police officer on their way. On reaching the Peters' stall, it was ascertained that a watch was put up, with the information that it belonged to a widow lady, and was to be sold for her benefit. The young man bid, and it was knocked down to him at $25. He promptly picked up the watch, handed over the $25, and walked out while the auctioneer went aside to make out two of Messrs. R. Sinclair & Co.'s improved thirty inch a receipt. The young man was pursued as stated. When the story was heard, the police officer told the young man, who held on to the watch, that he could keep the watch and go about his business, and ite slab is too transparent. A. Voice .- What about the sanitary movement Sir Charles thought every family should leave town at the end of the season. It was his opinion that all husbands paying the income tax should be compelled to take their wives and children to the sea side for the autumn months. It should have his earliest attention. In answer to another speaker, he considered that assembly rooms should be maintained in every town by the public purse.
