cotton, obtained from the following sources: French and Spanish Colonies, 6.000.000 Dutch Colonies, Portugese Colonies. East India, procured from Ostend. 5,700,000 Smyrna or Turkey, None from the United States.

In the three years of 1824, 1825, and 1826 Great Britain imported an average of 189,595,000 pounds. and this quantity was obtained from the following sources, the imports of the three years being reduced United States of America, Brazil, 21,600,000 East Indies, 17,184,000

Turkey and Egypt, 12,229,000 West Indies, 6,408,000 All other countries, 10,000,000 In the three years of 1853, 1851, and 1855 the total quantity imported into Great Britain reached an

Thus, in 1787, the British imported no cotton whatever from the United States, while in 1824, 1825, and 1826 they imported 64 per cent of all they used from this country, and in 1853, 1854, and 1855 they imported 77 per cent. It is therefore in-

SIGNOR BRIGNOLI.—The following extract from the Havana correspondence of the New York Express, will interest those of our readers who were fortunate enough to hear Signor Brignoli in Opera last week. Speaking of the success of Maretzek's troupe at Havana, the writer says : Brignoli, too, has done wonders. Think of it,-Brignoli, the insouciant, has been found to sing-as he can sing-well. He really exerted himself, stopped flirting and took to study, par consequence, he has learned two good things, how to study an I to behave himself. On his first appearance before the discriminating Creole and Spanish audience of Havana in the role of Edgardo, he sang no better than he would have done on the stage of the Academy of Music. What was the consequence? No expression of disapprobation was given, for a hiss is mauvaise ton in Havana, but, one by one, the Spaniard and Cuban, left the theatre, until, in the last thrilling scene, Brignoli found he had to sing to empty boxes. Annoyed and mortified at such an exhibition of want of appreciation, he flew to a sympathizing friend for an explanation. It was given in four words: "Mon ami, you sing false-you have no heart in your notes-you do not exert yourself-you are passionless, and my compatriots do not pardon such faults a second time." "Mais, ce n'pas ma faute-La Grange-she is cold—she freezes me. I cannot sing with her-she is not passionee."

"Ah! ce-bien-nous verrons." And the sympathizing friend seeks La Grange. She advises her of Brignoti's complaint of her, which caused the fair cantatrice much amusement. She determines to be very ardent the following evening, to prove to Brignoli that his bad singing was not to be laid to her charge. Brignoli meantime had arrived at a similar conclusion. It is needless to tell how well Somnambuferred that the United States possess advantages in the culture and exportation of this article, which place them in this respect far ahead of all competi- and spirit. There were no empty benches that night tors. In relation to the manufacture of cotton Great and the stage was completely carpeted with flowers, Britain occupies the foreground.
