From the Literary Filibuster. To a Ginny-Foul, That comes and squawks under my winder periodikly and makes me mad exceedinkly.

You missuble speckled critter, you! What'n thunder're squawking about?
Does anythink hurt you bad? Or do you squawk
That way in Ginny, where you come from,
And so squawks new from educational prejudice? What'n mischief do you pull your homely head Out'n from under your wing and squawk for, What's under your wing to make you squawk, You speckled "cuss?" Somethink offensive, I reck'n, elsewise
You'd keep it there, for it looks better hid.
What do you get on the fence and squawk for?
Do you see anything ala mink, you white-gilled, Speckle-feathered, squawking fool! How do you spose a feller can read or rite, Or sleep or live, you discordant old busted Brass French-horn, with all the keys open And the mouth-piece cracked?

I wish I could pizen you, you everlastin', perpetual squa-kink machine! What're you thinkink about ?-home ?-You rascally epitome of a Ginny war-gong, A Congo tum-tum and conch-shell, And a down-east village brass band ! Dry up! you speckled parody of a machine shop!
Do you think that's music, you outrageous, vocal atrocity
You boiler-maker's exacerbated ocho! You squawking abstract of Pandemonium, Do you think a feller can afford to furnish boot-jacks

And so forth to chunk you with daily, dog you? Maybe you think its funny, you speckled pagan of Afriki extraction ! Is your squawkink, sass? or a'nt you 'feared of me, say ' You brazen-throated, sheet-iron-lunged culmination Of foul creation? Here's my blackin' brush at you!

Our Friends in Reaven.

Perhaps the first thought suggested to most Christians by the mention of the society in heaven, is of their own personal friends, whom they have a right to hope to meet there. The frequency and the earnestness with which the question is asked, " Shall we know our friends in heaven ?" serves to illustrate the fact that God made man to find no inconsiderable portion of his happiness in loving and in being loved by a limited number of peculiar, personal friends .-The question just quoted seems to be gratuitous; y at it has a great interest for multitudes, precisely because so much of human happiness depends upon the proximity and the fellowship of earthly friends Close upon the question, "Shall we know cur friends ?" follows another, "Shall we be with them?" " Will they be to us in heaven what they have been to us on earth ?" Nothing can be more natural than the asking of those question; yet they ought never to have occasioned great anxiety in the hearts of Christians, nor would they have done so but for the lamentable distrust of God's kindness which prevails. Just as surely as God gave to friendship all its charm and worth, just as surely as he made love and friendship and the interchange of friendly offices, our necessity as well as our joy, and an inseparable portion of our immortal nature, just as surely as God himself is love, and the truest, warmest friend in the universe, just so surely will be reunite Christian friends in heaven .- Jas. William Kimball.

RELIGION WITHOUT GOD .- The following striking contrasts are from an unknown pen. We found it cast abroad, a waif without an owner, and have appropriated it for the benefit of our readers.

There is a tendency in some quarters, to substitute philanthropy for piety, instead of penetrating it with and governing it by piety; to put kindness for holiness, and give a religion to humanity, charity liberality, etc., with God left out. It is no religion at all. It is a bold moralism, developing rapidly into Anti-Christ. It affects to abolish the eternal distinction between morality and religion; and then, since the only hope of holding fast the christian element. in popular moral movements, lies in clearly distinguishing between the religious and the moral, it gives us a rabid and strengthless moralism, with the reliout of piety is worth nothing."
