We neglected sooner to notice the appearance of the Herald on the 1st inst. in an entirely new dress either to submit a proposition on the crisis, or to speak and form. Instead of six columns, it has now seven on each page, though they are not quite as wide as formerly. It presents quite a creditable appearance. We negroes are fortifying the harbor, and that the channels wish its clever and gentlemanly proprietor all the pecuniary success which his enterprise deserves.

We notice that our friend Robinson, of the Goldsboro' Rough Notes, has disposed of that establishment to Dr. J. J. LAWRENCE, formerly of the Wilson Star of Freedom. THE SUPPOSED LOSS OF THE SLOOP SPRAY .- The of Jackalow, now awaiting his trial at Trenton, N. Y., act. Terms: One per cent of the purchase money required in was purchased some two months since by gentlemen in cash, the balance to be secured by bonds drawing interest | North Carolina, for the purpose of putting her on the Cape Fear river as a passenger packet between Wilmington and Smithville. After undergoing some repairs, and taking in freight, she sailed from New York about the 9th of November, under the charge of a capplace, situated within one mile of Wilmington, and tain, mate and boy employed for the trip, and taking missioners as insolent, and returned it. They started one passenger. They proceeded safely to Norfolk, when for home this morning. the passenger left and proceeded to his destination by land. Since then no tidings of the boat have reached Any person desirous of purchasing, may get a bargain by the owners. The supposition is that the sloop has been blown out to sea and lost with all on board. If true the Spray was certainly a fatal vessel.

Norfolk (Va.,) Argus, 1st inst. The Spray arrived at Smithville about ten days since after a long passage, all safe and sound.

An Empty Delusion. It is commonly asserted by those who either wish to lull themselves and their friends into a false security, or having a majority in the Senate, she need not fear any of South Carolina with ten thousand dollars.

injury from Lincoln's election. Aside from the absurd fallacy of supposing that a majority in the Senate, did it exist, could be a sufficient vious to everybody who examines the facts that no such majority exists, and that after the fourth of next March, the South, even should we, for the sake of the argufurniture, together with a large and carefully selected stock Union, has not a certain majority in the Senate. The assertions, know that they are lying as usual. Senate is now composed of 66 members. In the next Congress, by the admission of Kansas, that number will almost certainly be increased to 68. Of these the fifteen Southern States, even if none should secede and South Carolina should send back her senators, have thirty members. Add Mr. Bright, of Indiana, Mr. Thomson, of New Jersey, Mr. Rice, of Minnesota, and Mr. Latham, of California, democratic senators from Northern tions giving the fortifications, etc., in the seceding States, and we find thirty-four to be the number of States to those States. seventh Congress, which expires on the 4th of March 1863. How will it be in the Thirty-eighth Congress Is there no reason to fear that black-republicans will fil the places of Messrs. Bright, Thompson, Rice, and Latham? Is it not almost certain that, with the exception, perhaps, of Mr. Thompson, whose State, alone of the free States, has partially stemmed the tide of abolition fanaticism, all the seats now occupied by democratic senators from the North, will be filled by black-republicans, and that Messrs. Bright, Rice, and Latham will share the fate of Messrs. Bigler, Fitch, and Pugh?-Where, then, is the fancied majority of friends of the 12,000 bales. South in the Senate? When a black-republican the gift of the Executive are filled with men of the same sable faith, are we to expect that the northern States which now exist, and those which will soon spring into existence from the swe'ling tide of population ceaselessly flowing westward, where the rampant fanaticism of black republican hatred of the south now exercises uncontrolled sway and irresponsible power, will send sena-tors to Congress animated by love for the south and her institutions? Before Judge Sharkey, of Mississippi, attempted to persuade his fellow-citizens at Vicksburg that the " majority of the South in the Senate" had the power to block the wheels of Mr. Lincoln's administration, refuse appropriations and defeat all objectionable Executive appointments, he would have done well to have examined the composition of the next Senate. Had he done so, we suppose that he would not have indulged in the his harangue, and made it obnoxious to the severe criticism which it has received.
