THE TILTAREENS .-- We regret to see that these skirts, which have for some time been "all the rage" at the North, are gradually making innovations upon the heretofore modest attire of our ladies. A young poet of a neighboring city, like us, disgusted with this "latest style," remonstrates in the following feeling lines, which have been kindly furnished us. If they will cause just one of our fair readers to throw aside the Tiltareen, they

OR

THE TILTAREEN!

"The Empress Trail Hoop Skirts," immortalized in th following stanzas, are commonly known as "TILTAREENS."

When artless girls not out of their teens Are parading the streets in their tiltareens, They enter, perhaps a dry goods store, And brushing by some obstruction before, The tilting-machines fly up behind, And charms, 'till then, to the dark confined. Are plumply exposed to the curious eve Of Tom, Dick, or Harry, passing by, Who can see, Dear Ladies, EVER SO HIGH !

Some men there may be who would not glance At your garters unveiled by ART or by chance : A few may modestly look away From the tempting wares your hoops display : Some may think but of HOSE-not what they enclose Of what is revealed-not what is concealed As yet, from the vulgar glare of day; But these are few and far between, And many a look and jest obscene Tilts up with a tilting tiltareen !

Could you see behind as well as before You would wear a tiltareen no more-You would blush at the thought of being SEEN Too MUCH from sporting a tiltareen! We will not love you a whit the less For hiding a bit of your loveliness, So though they now are "all the rage With "schule marms" of a doubtful age, Let vankees wear their own machines. Leave-leave to them the tiltareens!

Freedmen in South Carolina_Wise Order of General Scott for the Arrest of Vagrants. The rows and disturbances between the whites and negroes in Charleston have become of weekly occurrence, taking place generally on the Battery on Sunday evenings and are usually brought on by the negroes. The native Charleston negroes do not participate in, but on the contrary condemn the proceedings, which are the work of the refugee negroes from the plantations, who, as here in Richmond, have flocked into the city and the discharged negro soldiers. In view of the sloth and viciousness of the negro population, General Scott, commanding in South Carolina, has found it necessary to issue

Dear name, sacred ever to a Southern heart, All join in sympathy with thy saddened part, Varied be the means employed, the art Is gifted from above ; we know this, your heart. Still bows, "as our's," before its Maker, God.

EXTRACT FROM THE IRISH MELODIES .- We produce this morning another extract from the Irish Melodies. It is of the German Watchman Song :

THE WATCHES OF THE NIGHT.

10 O'clock. .

How widely night her shadows flings, O'er forest, mountain, billowy deep ! Ten thousand worlds ride on her wings. And through the gloom majestic sweep.

11 O'clock.

As when the gaudy flowers of May, Along the verdant meadows blow. So seem the sparkling gems that play, And through the lofty concave glow.

12 O'clock. 'Tis cold-on tiptoe silence stands,

No tread of foot the silence breaks ; But strong as fate's embattled bands, The eye of God forever wakes.

1 O'clock

Hark! hark! 'tis one-one solemn sound! Another day to man is given : So God's last trumpet will resound To burst the grave, and call to Heaven.

2 O'clock.

Twice winged the morning hours have fled, Although her beauties don't appear, But by the God of nature led, She blushing comes our souls to cheer.

3 O'clock.

Dread horrors stalk'd amid the shades-Thrice tolls the clock amid the gloom : Bright hope our vision's sweet pervades-Fear flies-and phantoms seek the tomb.

4 O'clock.

The Cock's loud Clarion greets the morn, Which soon shall come, young, rosy, gay, While industry, with plenty's horn, Awakes to bless the bounteous day.

5 O'clock

Since midnight drear hath past away, Five hours the faithful watchman trod His weary rounds-Lo! cheerful day! Be just, O man, and trust in God.

to keep a stock in the hands of our local agents, as it was our practice before the war. All business transactions being now reduced to cash, our sales will be made on the basis of ready pay. Our Gins are too well known to require any special notice or commendation ; we believe they are unrivalled in the chief points of excellence which go to make up a superior machine, namely : Speed, light draught and good sample. Our DOUBLE CYLINDER GINS will be found superior to the single cylinder, when parties have steam or good water power, to give them the necessary speed. In all cases when this can be done, we recommend them in preference to the single cylinder. If, however, indifferent or insufficient power is used, they will not do as well as the
