

The South and the Recent Elections.

The elections at the North for the Fortieth Congress, with a few insignificant exceptions, have now been held and the political complexion of that body decided.

The people of that section have declared against the policy of the President and in favor of that of Congress, by majorities sufficient to control the veto of the Executive.

The people of the South have for some time been prepared for this result, and its accomplishment has not added to the general gloom and apathy.

The very early meeting of Congress will end any suspense the South may feel in regard to the future policy of the Radicals.

The character and temper of their proceedings will display the courage given to the members by the late elections, which Mr. Stevens declared they required to meet the expectations of the people.

There are twenty-seven States at present represented in Congress, one less than enough to ratify the proposed Constitutional amendment.

There are twenty-seven States at present represented in Congress, one less than enough to ratify the proposed Constitutional amendment.

There are twenty-seven States at present represented in Congress, one less than enough to ratify the proposed Constitutional amendment.

There are twenty-seven States at present represented in Congress, one less than enough to ratify the proposed Constitutional amendment.

and sad experience to the South, nothing more than distress to them as consumers, and wealth to the capitalists.

Of the huge profits of manufacturing corporations he says: "Look at the dividends of manufacturing companies for a year past.

The only relief we can hope for is to become ourselves manufacturers. If we ever expect justice under the legislation of our Government, we must make our interest that of New England.

We have declined to encumber our columns with the details of the quarrel between the President and Directors of the Associated Press.

We are compelled to acknowledge that we are not satisfied with the past management of the Press Association.

And by the Ocean Telegraph we are kept informed, with commendable zeal, of the fate of the Chief of the Pirates in the Chinese Sea.

We have frequently alluded to the fact that by the early erection and operation of manufactories in the South, this section would not only enrich herself, but save the large amounts we are now paying into the treasuries of Northern manufactories.

But that our people are turning their attention to this important matter we are glad.

The Fayetteville and Western Railroad. So well assured are we that the future welfare and permanent prosperity of our city depend upon the completion of the Wilmington, Charlotte and Rutherford Railroad.

The disposition of Congress to protect the manufacturing interest of the United States, which causes high prices and large dividends, will force our people to try to be the recipient of this protection.

rant their friends in making hopeful exertions in their behalf. We publish to-day, from a distinguished citizen of our State, and one who has been connected with many of her important interests, and whose labors have contributed much to the welfare of North Carolina, an interesting letter upon the subject of the importance of the completion of the Fayetteville and Western Railroad to our citizens, as well as the advantages of Greensboro as the point of intersection on the North Carolina Railroad.

UPON the first of the present month a very large and enthusiastic Convention was held at Mount Vernon Springs, in Guilford, composed of delegates from Cumberland, Chatham and Guilford counties, in the interest of the Fayetteville and Western Railroad. Their action was such as we hope will redound to the great object of the Convention.

THE FAYETTEVILLE AND WESTERN RAILROAD. For the Journal. A Word to the People of Wilmington.

Messrs. Editors.—It is unnecessary to urge on the people of Wilmington the importance of building Railroads. They know that the industrial development of the State will depend on the facilities of getting to market; and they know, also, that now is the time to work.

It is the eternal law of God that man is to eat bread in the sweat of his face, and the untilled soil to bring forth thorns and thistles; and it is only by skilled industry, and prudent enterprise, with the blessing of Heaven, that the old wastes are to be restored and the face of nature renewed.

The Danville road has cut off from Wilmington the trade of a large and comparatively thrifty region—and the work in course of construction to Rutherfordton will not bring to the city a road which will open a great field for your city; but it will bring you the flour, tobacco, dried fruit, butter, &c., of Alamance, Randolph, Rowan, Davidson, Guilford, Stokes, Surry, Forsythe, Yadkin, Davie, Iredell, Alexander and Wilkes.

But those for whom I write are aware of this, and my purpose is to offer a suggestion as to the direction of some of their energies and means.

The Danville road has cut off from Wilmington the trade of a large and comparatively thrifty region—and the work in course of construction to Rutherfordton will not bring to the city a road which will open a great field for your city; but it will bring you the flour, tobacco, dried fruit, butter, &c., of Alamance, Randolph, Rowan, Davidson, Guilford, Stokes, Surry, Forsythe, Yadkin, Davie, Iredell, Alexander and Wilkes.

Wilmington and Manchester Railroad Workshops. We had the pleasure a few days since of inspecting the different workshops belonging to the Wilmington and Manchester Railroad, and were much pleased with the efficiency and completeness of their various departments and the finish and excellence of the work.

The manner in which the work is done, and the system and order which characterize the entire establishment, indicate that the affairs of this road are under the control of efficient, intelligent and industrious officials. We saw in the yard of this road a number of very superior freight cars, manufactured by "The Brunswick Car Company," under the management of Col. T. C. McIlhenny of this city. They are pronounced, by competent judges, to be equal to any made. We hope such enterprises will meet the encouragement they deserve.

NEW BOOKS. PREMIER KELLER—F. G. Trafford—Harper and Brothers, New York. Mr. Trafford, in this last work of his, has treated us to an old fashioned English novel, full of the pleasant varieties of English rural life, with characters as new as they are well studied and naturally portrayed.

THE IMPRISONMENT OF MR. JEFFERSON DAVIS. From the Paris Charivari. The laconic utterances of the cable telegraph are sometimes exceedingly cynical.

THE ROMANCES OF THE WAR. A correspondent of the Southern Recorder furnishes that paper with the following incident: LAST CHARGE FOR THE CONFEDERATE EAST OF THE MISSISSIPPI.

On the 18th day of April, 1865, General W. W. Allen of Alabama, commanding a division of Wheeler's army, had passed by the town of Alabama as he was leaving N. C., ordered a detachment from the first Georgia cavalry to hold them in check, for the division to march.

ROMANCES OF THE WAR. A correspondent of the Southern Recorder furnishes that paper with the following incident: LAST CHARGE FOR THE CONFEDERATE EAST OF THE MISSISSIPPI.

On the 18th day of April, 1865, General W. W. Allen of Alabama, commanding a division of Wheeler's army, had passed by the town of Alabama as he was leaving N. C., ordered a detachment from the first Georgia cavalry to hold them in check, for the division to march.

NEWSPAPER COMMENTS. The New York World says that the Republican States of the interior counties where the Radical representations could not be met and expected for the Union vote John T. Hoffman would have been elected by a tremendous majority.

NEWSPAPER COMMENTS. The New York World says that the Republican States of the interior counties where the Radical representations could not be met and expected for the Union vote John T. Hoffman would have been elected by a tremendous majority.

NEWSPAPER COMMENTS. The New York World says that the Republican States of the interior counties where the Radical representations could not be met and expected for the Union vote John T. Hoffman would have been elected by a tremendous majority.

NEWSPAPER COMMENTS. The New York World says that the Republican States of the interior counties where the Radical representations could not be met and expected for the Union vote John T. Hoffman would have been elected by a tremendous majority.

NEWSPAPER COMMENTS. The New York World says that the Republican States of the interior counties where the Radical representations could not be met and expected for the Union vote John T. Hoffman would have been elected by a tremendous majority.

NEWSPAPER COMMENTS. The New York World says that the Republican States of the interior counties where the Radical representations could not be met and expected for the Union vote John T. Hoffman would have been elected by a tremendous majority.

The Judicial Powers of the Freedmen's Bureau Declared Null.

The Louisville Courier of the 24th ultimo reports the following case: The case of Smith vs. Reed was disposed of in the United States Circuit Court yesterday, and the "Bureau's jurisdiction" is pronounced null and void.

By the naturalist, the beautiful South, with its picturesque valleys, hills, and mountains, is viewed as the land of the oak, the palmetto, and the orange; but to the philanthropist, who looks upon the inner life of hearts and honors, it is the land of the eypress and willow, and spreads out gloomily as a waste panorama of disappointment and sorrow.

By the naturalist, the beautiful South, with its picturesque valleys, hills, and mountains, is viewed as the land of the oak, the palmetto, and the orange; but to the philanthropist, who looks upon the inner life of hearts and honors, it is the land of the eypress and willow, and spreads out gloomily as a waste panorama of disappointment and sorrow.

By the naturalist, the beautiful South, with its picturesque valleys, hills, and mountains, is viewed as the land of the oak, the palmetto, and the orange; but to the philanthropist, who looks upon the inner life of hearts and honors, it is the land of the eypress and willow, and spreads out gloomily as a waste panorama of disappointment and sorrow.

By the naturalist, the beautiful South, with its picturesque valleys, hills, and mountains, is viewed as the land of the oak, the palmetto, and the orange; but to the philanthropist, who looks upon the inner life of hearts and honors, it is the land of the eypress and willow, and spreads out gloomily as a waste panorama of disappointment and sorrow.

By the naturalist, the beautiful South, with its picturesque valleys, hills, and mountains, is viewed as the land of the oak, the palmetto, and the orange; but to the philanthropist, who looks upon the inner life of hearts and honors, it is the land of the eypress and willow, and spreads out gloomily as a waste panorama of disappointment and sorrow.

By the naturalist, the beautiful South, with its picturesque valleys, hills, and mountains, is viewed as the land of the oak, the palmetto, and the orange; but to the philanthropist, who looks upon the inner life of hearts and honors, it is the land of the eypress and willow, and spreads out gloomily as a waste panorama of disappointment and sorrow.

By the naturalist, the beautiful South, with its picturesque valleys, hills, and mountains, is viewed as the land of the oak, the palmetto, and the orange; but to the philanthropist, who looks upon the inner life of hearts and honors, it is the land of the eypress and willow, and spreads out gloomily as a waste panorama of disappointment and sorrow.

By the naturalist, the beautiful South, with its picturesque valleys, hills, and mountains, is viewed as the land of the oak, the palmetto, and the orange; but to the philanthropist, who looks upon the inner life of hearts and honors, it is the land of the eypress and willow, and spreads out gloomily as a waste panorama of disappointment and sorrow.

By the naturalist, the beautiful South, with its picturesque valleys, hills, and mountains, is viewed as the land of the oak, the palmetto, and the orange; but to the philanthropist, who looks upon the inner life of hearts and honors, it is the land of the eypress and willow, and spreads out gloomily as a waste panorama of disappointment and sorrow.

By the naturalist, the beautiful South, with its picturesque valleys, hills, and mountains, is viewed as the land of the oak, the palmetto, and the orange; but to the philanthropist, who looks upon the inner life of hearts and honors, it is the land of the eypress and willow, and spreads out gloomily as a waste panorama of disappointment and sorrow.

By the naturalist, the beautiful South, with its picturesque valleys, hills, and mountains, is viewed as the land of the oak, the palmetto, and the orange; but to the philanthropist, who looks upon the inner life of hearts and honors, it is the land of the eypress and willow, and spreads out gloomily as a waste panorama of disappointment and sorrow.

By the naturalist, the beautiful South, with its picturesque valleys, hills, and mountains, is viewed as the land of the oak, the palmetto, and the orange; but to the philanthropist, who looks upon the inner life of hearts and honors, it is the land of the eypress and willow, and spreads out gloomily as a waste panorama of disappointment and sorrow.

From the New York Watchman.

By the naturalist, the beautiful South, with its picturesque valleys, hills, and mountains, is viewed as the land of the oak, the palmetto, and the orange; but to the philanthropist, who looks upon the inner life of hearts and honors, it is the land of the eypress and willow, and spreads out gloomily as a waste panorama of disappointment and sorrow.

By the naturalist, the beautiful South, with its picturesque valleys, hills, and mountains, is viewed as the land of the oak, the palmetto, and the orange; but to the philanthropist, who looks upon the inner life of hearts and honors, it is the land of the eypress and willow, and spreads out gloomily as a waste panorama of disappointment and sorrow.

By the naturalist, the beautiful South, with its picturesque valleys, hills, and mountains, is viewed as the land of the oak, the palmetto, and the orange; but to the philanthropist, who looks upon the inner life of hearts and honors, it is the land of the eypress and willow, and spreads out gloomily as a waste panorama of disappointment and sorrow.

By the naturalist, the beautiful South, with its picturesque valleys, hills, and mountains, is viewed as the land of the oak, the palmetto, and the orange; but to the philanthropist, who looks upon the inner life of hearts and honors, it is the land of the eypress and willow, and spreads out gloomily as a waste panorama of disappointment and sorrow.

By the naturalist, the beautiful South, with its picturesque valleys, hills, and mountains, is viewed as the land of the oak, the palmetto, and the orange; but to the philanthropist, who looks upon the inner life of hearts and honors, it is the land of the eypress and willow, and spreads out gloomily as a waste panorama of disappointment and sorrow.

By the naturalist, the beautiful South, with its picturesque valleys, hills, and mountains, is viewed as the land of the oak, the palmetto, and the orange; but to the philanthropist, who looks upon the inner life of hearts and honors, it is the land of the eypress and willow, and spreads out gloomily as a waste panorama of disappointment and sorrow.

By the naturalist, the beautiful South, with its picturesque valleys, hills, and mountains, is viewed as the land of the oak, the palmetto, and the orange; but to the philanthropist, who looks upon the inner life of hearts and honors, it is the land of the eypress and willow, and spreads out gloomily as a waste panorama of disappointment and sorrow.

By the naturalist, the beautiful South, with its picturesque valleys, hills, and mountains, is viewed as the land of the oak, the palmetto, and the orange; but to the philanthropist, who looks upon the inner life of hearts and honors, it is the land of the eypress and willow, and spreads out gloomily as a waste panorama of disappointment and sorrow.

By the naturalist, the beautiful South, with its picturesque valleys, hills, and mountains, is viewed as the land of the oak, the palmetto, and the orange; but to the philanthropist, who looks upon the inner life of hearts and honors, it is the land of the eypress and willow, and spreads out gloomily as a waste panorama of disappointment and sorrow.

By the naturalist, the beautiful South, with its picturesque valleys, hills, and mountains, is viewed as the land of the oak, the palmetto, and the orange; but to the philanthropist, who looks upon the inner life of hearts and honors, it is the land of the eypress and willow, and spreads out gloomily as a waste panorama of disappointment and sorrow.

By the naturalist, the beautiful South, with its picturesque valleys, hills, and mountains, is viewed as the land of the oak, the palmetto, and the orange; but to the philanthropist, who looks upon the inner life of hearts and honors, it is the land of the eypress and willow, and spreads out gloomily as a waste panorama of disappointment and sorrow.

By the naturalist, the beautiful South, with its picturesque valleys, hills, and mountains, is viewed as the land of the oak, the palmetto, and the orange; but to the philanthropist, who looks upon the inner life of hearts and honors, it is the land of the eypress and willow, and spreads out gloomily as a waste panorama of disappointment and sorrow.

By the naturalist, the beautiful South, with its picturesque valleys, hills, and mountains, is viewed as the land of the oak, the palmetto, and the orange; but to the philanthropist, who looks upon the inner life of hearts and honors, it is the land of the eypress and willow, and spreads out gloomily as a waste panorama of disappointment and sorrow.

THE SPIRIT OF RADICALISM.

Wendell Phillips delivered the third lecture of the Free-trade Course last evening, at Meeting Room, Tuesday, Nov. 6.

Wendell Phillips delivered the third lecture of the Free-trade Course last evening, at Meeting Room, Tuesday, Nov. 6.

Wendell Phillips delivered the third lecture of the Free-trade Course last evening, at Meeting Room, Tuesday, Nov. 6.

Wendell Phillips delivered the third lecture of the Free-trade Course last evening, at Meeting Room, Tuesday, Nov. 6.

Wendell Phillips delivered the third lecture of the Free-trade Course last evening, at Meeting Room, Tuesday, Nov. 6.

Wendell Phillips delivered the third lecture of the Free-trade Course last evening, at Meeting Room, Tuesday, Nov. 6.

Wendell Phillips delivered the third lecture of the Free-trade Course last evening, at Meeting Room, Tuesday, Nov. 6.

Wendell Phillips delivered the third lecture of the Free-trade Course last evening, at Meeting Room, Tuesday, Nov. 6.

Wendell Phillips delivered the third lecture of the Free-trade Course last evening, at Meeting Room, Tuesday, Nov. 6.

Wendell Phillips delivered the third lecture of the Free-trade Course last evening, at Meeting Room, Tuesday, Nov. 6.

Wendell Phillips delivered the third lecture of the Free-trade Course last evening, at Meeting Room, Tuesday, Nov. 6.

Wendell Phillips delivered the third lecture of the Free-trade Course last evening, at Meeting Room, Tuesday, Nov. 6.

Wendell Phillips delivered the third lecture of the Free-trade Course last evening, at Meeting Room, Tuesday, Nov. 6.