THE VIRGINIA ELECTION.

The election returns from Virginia will carry sadness to the hearts of many outside her own borders. Thousands of her sons who are scattered through every State, from the Susquehanna to the Rio Grande, will mourn over the disgrace and humiliation to which she has been brought in the hour of her sorest need.

Virginia! the grand old Commonwealth; the "Mother of States and Statesmen"-of Washington, and Jefferson, and Clay, and Lee-now lies prostrate, at the feet of the conqueror, a rich jewel in the hands of the

The Hunnicutt ticket has been elected in Richmond, after a three-days' contest, in which Conservative negroes were mobbed and driven from the polls, and which, but blood. This were bad enough; but the further intelligence reaches us that the Hunnicutt party will have a decisive majority in

With what is generally termed National politics we have but little to do; but when the issue is brought to our very doors, we array ourselves on the side of Conservatism, and against any and all parties that would wrest the Government of this State from those to whom it properly belongs.

With the people of Ohio, we take our position against negro domination. while, as a son of Virginia, we grieve over her terrible fate, we must brush the tear of sadness from our cheek, and prepare to do battle in the fierce conflict that will soon commence in our own State.

We tell the white men of North Carolina that they must no longer hesitate. The time ladies' parlor, and held a council of war on has come for action—united and determined action. By means of the secret Leagues established in every county, and town, and hamlet of Virginia, the party lines have been unmistakably drawn. In that State, color has been made the test; and the two parties that recently contended for the mastery were, a BLACK MAN'S PARTY and a WHITE Man's Party. The vote conclusively establishes this point. The negroes and whites voted almost en masse for their respective candidates. In Petersburg the former polled some twenty-five hundred votes for the Radical candidates, and only five for the Conservative candidates. In Richmond, and, in short, throughout Virginia, the polls show a similar result.

Carolina to-day, though the organization of the blacks may not be so complete. It is folly for the whites to waste their time in microscopic searches after Conservative negroes. They are not here; and if you hope bers of the "Loyal League."

This State must not be surrendered to strangers and negroes without a struggle. The election in North Carolina can and must a majority that cannot be overcome if they will go to the election precincts and poll

In the meantime, let the people organize, and bring out their candidates Conservative men, but men who will go to the Convention, if elected, and uphold the honor of to legislate for us. We want no missionaries Chronicle.

from Ohio to explain the advantages of negro suffrage in the South, while fifty thousand majority is recorded against it in their own "Buckeye" State. Let them begin their charity at home. They will find a more extended field there than in North Carolina; and, after they force their favorite dogmas on their own people, at the point of the bayonet, then their consistency may be seen and appreciated here.

In the election to take place on the nineteenth and twentieth of November, there can be no neutrality in a North Carolinian. No newspaper can be silent and unmoved when the issue is such an one as is now presented for decision. Between "Union Leaguers' copie of this State can register as voters, and North Carolina we decide in favor of the latter, and unfurl her banner to the

> Among the patents granted last week was one for "improved composition for sausages," whereupon the New York Commercial Advertiser observes: "We have heard of a mixture of dog, red flannel and turnips, as a composition for sausage, but it is not likely that it was ever patented. What the improvement may be we are at a loss to imagine." The patentee will probably keep his secret and sell his sausages.

Direct trade between Europe and the South is springing up. Steam lines are in operation between Liverpool and New Orleans, and North Germany and New Orleans. It is also announced that there are now seven ships on their way from Liverpool to Savannah, with assorted cargoes, and one from Stockholm, bringing a load of iron. Cotton will form the bulk of their return cargo.

An Englishman, who is fond of hunting up legal statistics, says that England contains one lawyer to every 1240 inhabitants: would have been one continuous carnival of France one to every 1970, and Prussia one to every 15,000. This he regards as one of the secrets of Prussia's prosperity.

MARRIED TO SAVE ROOM.

Finding, the Hotel Crowded, a Couple Get Married in Order that Both may Sleep in the Same Bed.

At a late hour in the evening a party of young gentlemen and two young ladies arrived at a hotel in St. Paul. The several individuals desired separate rooms, though all belonged to the same party, and it did no seem unreasonable that the two ladies should occupy one room, while the two gentlemen occupied another. On account of the crowd ed state of the hotel, it was found impossible to give each a separate room, and they were so informed. They then retired to the the subject of the manner in which they were to be accommodated. After a short time, one of the young gentlemen sought an interview with the proprietor of the hotel, and said he thought the matter could be satisfactorily arranged if the proper officials could

"What officials do you require, my dear sir?" was the very polite but peremptory request of the host.

He replied that either a clergyman or a justice of the peace would answer. No sooner said than done! A justice of the peace was summoned, and, in about three minutes, the young man and one of the young ladies were made one flesh, according to the statute in such case made and provided.

This little ceremony, costing the hotel nothing, and only involving the parties in the expense of the fee to the justice and the revenue stamp on the marriage certificate, saved to the hotel one room, which was soon The same state of affairs exists in North after let to an elderly gentleman from up the country, at the rate of $3 a day.

FROM WASHINGTON

fitate, with a fair, and daily Treasury Investigation Prospective Removal of Superintendent Clark-Tenure of Office Law-President Johnson's WASHINGTON, O. It is given out that the committee on re-trenchment, now examining into the affairs of the printing bureau of the Treasury Department, will ask Secretary McCulloch to suspend S. M. Clark from the superinten-dency of the bureau above named.

The members of the committee to inquire into the assassination of Mr. Lincoln arrived to-day, but did not transact any business. They expect to proceed with the inquiry tomorrow.

in proposing to treat the tenure of office law as unconstitutional, by the removal instead of suspension of Mr. Stanton, the President is inconsistent with his avowed policy to regard all the acts of Congress as legal and valid until decided to be the reverse by the Supreme Court. In answer to this, it is understood, Mr. Johnson makes this distinction between his responsibility and duty under the tenure of office act and other acts of Congress passed over his veto, and which he yet regards as unconstitutional, namely: that in the matter of the removal of members of the Cabinet, there are but two persons who can take the initiative and do the act or acts that will make a case for the adjudication of the Supreme Court, and these two persons are the President and the Cabinet officer removed, whereas in the other laws of Congress other officers and citizens are the parties directly affected, and are required to perform, or refuse to perform, the acts that make up a case for the decision of the Supreme Court.

In this view of the subject, Mr. Johnson was the only one who could take such action as would eventually carry the case before the court; no one could take the initiative in the matter of the removal of a Cabinet minister for him. He alone has the power of removal of that officer. In the execution of other acts of Congress, the Executive necessarily leaves it to the parties aggrieved, or whose rights are directly affected by the laws, to test the constitutionality of the laws.

The World on its "Last Legs."

There is always an anxiety among a considerable portion of the population of the world about the doom of the planet in which they live. They anticipate the end of the world, and whilst a few prepare for it, the view, among others, has lately joined the ranks of these anticipators of the end of the world, and declares that some change is soon to take place in the planet. He writes in rather a frightened vein, and says : "What this change is to be we dare not even conjecture; but we see in the heavens themselves some traces of destructive elements, and some indications of their power. The frag-ments of broken planets, the descent of meteoric stones upon our globe, the wheeling comets welding their loose materials in our own satelite, the appearance of new stars and the disappearance of others, are as the solar furnace, the volcanic eruptions, foreshadows of that impending convulsion to which the system of the world is doomed. Thus placed on a planet which is to be burned up, and under heavens which are to pass away; thus treading, as it were, on the cemeteries, and dwelling upon the mausoleums of former worlds, let us learn the lesson of humility and wisdom, if we have not already been taught in the school of revelation."-Philadelphia Ledger.
