THE RADICAL MASS (?) MEETING - DEC-LARATIONS OF PRINCIPLES-OUTBURSTS OF ELOQUENGE (?) .- It seems that the Radical meeting on Thursday last, for which so much preparation had been made, and which it was intended should be a mass, turned out only a skeleton. All through the morning about two hundred negroes, with one drum to every ten men, paraded the streets with Maj. J. W. Schenck, Chief Marshal of the day, at their head, trying to drum up recruits, but we learn that their efforts only accumulated about three hundred at Camp Lamb, where a meeting was organized and the three Radical candidates for Convention opened their months and their hearts in defining their "position." The Post of vesterday contains a full, and we presume a correct, account of the specches, some of the points of which we copy for the amusement of our readers. The first person introduced was Gen. Jos. C.

Abbott. Says the Post, "He announced that he came before the people to-day to announce himself," &c., &c., &c. If elected, he proposed to act, among other things, "in making loyalty respectable." A very laudable undertaking on the part of the General, in which we this modern Quixote will prove far more easy, viz: "to make the Confederate debt null and void." Warmed by this heroic self-devotion, he declared that "he felt himself as much a citizen as the oldest native before him," which was a very safe position. Soaring aloft into the regions of eloquence, we have the startling comparison of the State to a wrecked ship. He thought that a man who had committed treason should keep on the back seat. At this point, the reporter becomes very indefinite. He says, in parentheses, "Appls use." We are left to conjecture in what way they were used. We trust, at any rate, that they were not rotten.
"No harm will come from giving the colored people what is right." Not a hit! "Nay, it will be the best thing we ever did." So it will! "Let us, then, give it to them." We will, we will! Finally he declares, "And should you elect me to go to Raleigh, I shall come back to you with a clean breast, having advocated the cause of justice, education and liberty." Upon this condition we say, let him go by all means.

A. H. Galloway, (col.), was introduced:
"He said that so far as his weak ability can go, he thought that his color was an evidence of the course he should pursues in the Constitutional Convention. He was a negro (a voice, I blieve you). He hoped that the people are aware that the Coursevatives," who are they? "were no friends, but open enemies," and a rigmarele of other stuff containing nothing of interest save the remarkably benighted declaration. "The Northern elections leave us stronger to-day than ever before. Again, suf-frage, freedom, liberty, and our human rights, is stronger to-day than ever on this conti-

It then gave the Chairman great pleasure to introduce the Rev. S. S. Ashley, (winte), "the pioneer of education in North Carolina." The Pioneer said "he was called an adventurer," we thought pioneers were generally adventurers, "he spurned that back, he was proud to know that he was a Yankee, and he glorified in the title." (Italies are our own.) "The Paritans, he said, have been ridiculed, yes, ridiculed by men who knew not the difference between a Purltan and a Hottentot." Is there any? "The Puritans could not be honored by these people," no indeed; "the Puritans were the praying people" oh! "they were christian people "ah! "and they advocated the truths of freedom," enough said! After beseeching the crowd "to continue in our broad in the country of the coun ideas," the Pioneer sat down amidst a great clatter, and the meeting went home to supper, those who had any.

breaking down gates, &c. It was not very late, and it is unaccountable that the police did not see or hear them, or if they did, that the persons were not arrested. The depredations were not confined to any particular por-tion of the city, but were committed at various widely distant points, and on some of the prin-ciple streets. What is the use of a police force if the property of citizens is not to be protect-ed? We said that the parties were unknown, but suspicion points to persons dispersing him, when depicting the scenes of disappointment described, and he replies by saying that he has not the slightest degree of sympathy for any man that has been caught in the matrimonial trap, as has the astronomist of Wilmington. We suspect that the local man of the Star has been studying the fable of the Fox whose tail was caught in the steel trap; if so, we can readily see why he would deprive our "head centre" of his liberties. "Against the insidious wiles of matrimonial influence, the jealousy of a free people should be constantly awake," and we will defend that worthy class of persons, ill-naturedly denominated "Bacheors" and "Old maids" against the combined hosts of matrimony, in the language of Finne-gan "any time, any where." We will approoriate the "reflections" of the Star, and in the meantime we salute its ill starred hero. - North Carolinian. Ah! neighbor, has it come to this! We think we know the ring of that paragraph. Lee, the devotee, has become Lee, the cynic. It is often remarked that the most assiduous worshippers become the most bitter scoffers when once they find the smiles of their Goddess turned to frowns, and who can gainsay its truth when they read the above and think of those days in Wilmington when, to the author, the golden hours flew by on wings of-well we won't say what, but suffice the assertion that he is not a bachelor through choice; and as for his worthy Patriarch, we sadly need his sympathy, for we too are a bachelor, but then we are not old and hardened as he is, and there is some hope for us yet, while some day the "devil" will dance over his lonely grave, glad to be rid of so much bad "copy."

STATE COUNCIL FRIENDS OF TEMPER-ANCE. - As several conflicting statements have appeared in regard to the time of holding the State Council of the Friends of Temperance, we have made inquiry as to the true state of the case, and have learned from those in authority in the body, that the Council will certainly meet in this city on Friday, the 22d inst. The citizens who have made preparation to entertain the delegates will, therefore, be relieved of all further doubts on the sub-

No bedy in the State has accomplished so much good in so short a time as the Friends of Temperance. In our city the results of its labors are plainly manifested in the persons of numerous young men, who were fast going to ruin, now purified and regenerated, pursuing upright and industrious courses that will lead wish him much success. Gen. R. B. Vance, and other prominent persons will be present, among them our learned confrere of the Roanoke News, for whose special benefit we have ordered forty-six gallons of raccoon ovsters. The poor fellow has lived on muscles all his life, and we fear he will hurt himself when he gets hold of a real royal Bengal oyster. Let him make his will before he comes, for they say unless you take something besides water on top of them the consequences to a new beginner are often terrible. Poor

TIRED OF IT.—The recent ridiculous failure of the grand Radical mass meeting, proves that the colored people of Wilmington have far more sense than the Radical leaders who would lead them by the nose gave them credit for. They are tired of these senseless blusters, and they find an honest day's work far more profitable than one spent in listening to incendiary doctrines that will never put bread into their mouths, but, on the contrary, fool them out of their hard earned money to support in idleness the men who harangue them. If they want to vote the Radical ticket, let them go and do so quietly, but what is the use of mass meetings and processions and speeches and subscriptions. The colored people are coming to their senses, and appreciating the fact that these men only want their votes and a dollar from each man to pay their expenses. We are told that on Thursday the Marshals rode about the streets trying to persuade men to join the procession, but with little success. This is sensible, let the colored people mind their own business and vote as

" THE OLDEST HOUSE IN THE CITY."-Over the picture of a coffin, Mr. Geo. Copes advertises in the STAR "the oidest and best house in the city." Wicked man, to jest on house in the city none will deny, but who dares say it is the best? But George is a reckless sort of a youth, who drives a dashing team or wears a weeping hat, with equal grace and propriety. However this may be, he can do the best cabinet work in the city, and every-MIDNIGHT MARAUDERS.—On Thursday thing he turns out from his shop on Princess night a party or parties of persons unknown, committed various depredations about the city in the way of tearing palings from fences, he is one of the best artificers in the city.
