The Great West.

Heretofore the Great West has been considered the favored of all regions. Fortunes have been amassed in that El Dorado of the world with lightning speed; but now the general prostration in business has extended, like the "Star of empire," Westward, and complaints of "dull times" come from that great section waukee paper states that the occupations regarded as fit for gentlemen hands or his complexion, takes away much from a man's money-making power, and the luxury of earning an easy genteel living, must be paid for in the obvious way of receiving less wages. All Western cities are crowded with clerks, telegraph operators, and teachers, who can only and sleep in the same bed, if convenient. just manage to live on the bare necessaries of life. The wages paid in the mechanic arts are actually smaller than in the cities of the At- day. lantic coast. Incompetent or lazy men cannot hope, then, to better their condition by moving out West. Patient industry and a cheerful spirit will enable the hopeful mechanie to be satisfied with food and clothing while waiting for the better time coming.
