What a White Man can do.

While negro Radicals are driving drays and sampling cotton, and white men are left out to starve, it does one's heart good to see evidences of energy such as we witnessed yesterday. We met a friend of ours, a former member of the Louisiana Guards, Drew's Battalion, a gentleman of education and a fine clerk, peddling about with a lot of scrubbing brooms on his back.

We first shook hands with him and asked him what he was doing.

"Don't you see," he replied—"I am making bread for my wife and children. Having lost my situation as a clerk, I went around amongst our merchants and asked them to let me drive one of their drays, instead of placing them in the hands of Radical negroes; but I was not successful, so I went home and turned my ingenuity to the manufacturing of scrubbing brooms, which, I boast, can beat anything in Uncle Sam's navy, and I go along peddling them; ain't it funny?"

"No," we replied, "not funny, but just the thing a man of honor should do; and may all others follow your example."

So, good housewives of Mobile, if our friend John Bayne comes along with his "patent India rubber scrubbing brooms," as he pompously and facetiously styles them, give him a lift. A word to the wise.—Mobile Register.

Too Much Marrying in one Family.

A fearful murder occurred a few days since near Chesterfield, Illinois. The particulars are about as follows:

A woman living in the vicinity of Chesterfield had married successively two brothers named Sherman, and on the death of the second husband a third brother aspired to her hand. She looked favorably upon his suit, but her own brother, named Roper, thinking the marrying of two members of one family was enough, swore that she should not marry a third. Thus matters stood until last Tuesday, when the woman and her brother-in-law Sherman, while out riding met her brother, Roper, also driving a team. Sherman gave halt the road, but Roper did not give any, and the wagons locked. A quarrel ensued between the two men. Roper struck Sherman with a stick, whereupon the latter drew a revolver, which went off in the scuffle and the ball struck Mrs. Sherman, killing her almost instantly.

The Alabama Fraud.

We read that large numbers of negroes have been fraudulently voted, though not on the registration lists; and that, not content with this, the polls all over the State are to be reopened. Such is the tenor of the dispatches from Montgomery. It is also stated that "the President of the Convention proposes to issue certificates of the ratification of the new Constitution and of the election of candidates running under it."

In short, all goes well for the "reconstruction" swindle. There is power and villainy enough in the managers of this business in Alabama to put it through, no matter what the actual vote, and there is no occasion whatever for any pretence of extra reconstruction zeal in Congress. Let this be reserved for the more difficult cases of Virginia and North Carolina.—National Intelligencer.

The reaction so manifest in this State last Fall has been followed by new and marked successes and great Democratic gains in the recent town elections. Revolutions never go backward. These successes are more than mere straws; they are almost positive indications that the State will give a Democratic majority of one hundred thousand next November instead of the fifty thousand generally conceded; and such cheering news from different sections of the State will stimulate the Conservatives and Democrats of New Hampshire to wipe out the small Radical majority of last year, and the Democracy of Connecticut to give English a majority which will turn the hundreds of last Spring into thousands next April.—N. Y. World.

The Dry Goods Trade.

There are wide differences of opinion among those who ought to be able to pronounce an intelligent judgment in relation to the prospects of the dry goods market the coming season. Some sagacious buyers are laying in a good supply of domestics in anticipation of a rise in prices, while some very cautious dealers are holding back, under the belief that there must inevitably be a decline, on account of the chaotic condition of political affairs. In short, there are bulls and bears in dry goods as well as in railroads, gold and bonds. For our own part, we have no hesitation in giving our opinion that the bulls in dry goods this spring will have the best time of it; and this opinion is based on the evident tendency of the market at this early period of the season, upon the ease in monetary affairs growing out of the passage of the non-contraction bill, upon the advance in the price of cotton, upon the comparatively light stock in first hands, and the universally admitted bare condition of the country generally. These remarks apply to cotton goods mainly; in woollens the prospect of better prices is not by any means encouraging. The transactions in domestics during the past week have been large, but sales have been chiefly to houses for "stocking up;" unusual severity of the weather has checked orders from the country to a considerable extent, but every day must bring now an accession of out-town purchasers.

[New York Independent.

Cool Freak of a Lunatic.

DOYLESTOWN, PA., Feb. 18.

A few evenings since a respectable citizen of New Britain, who is subject to fits of insanity, was staying at the residence of a neighbor named Good. He went to bed as usual, but about two o'clock in the morning he arose and told them he would go home. After he had proceeded a short distance alone, he pulled off his boots and stockings on one side of the road, divested himself of all his clothing, and threw them on the other side, and then proceeded on his homeward march, occasionally lying down on the snow by way of variety.

He imagined that the judgment morn had come, and thought to ascend to heaven in the same state in which he had come into the world. Continuing his perilous walk he arrived at the church in New Britain, about a quarter before four in the morning, shouting at the top of his voice. The noise awakened some of his neighbors, who found him sitting on the door-step of the church. They soon conducted him to his home near by, where restoratives were applied. This occurred on one of the coldest mornings of the winter, the thermometer sinking some six or seven degrees below zero, yet strange to say he seemed to have suffered no serious injury, excepting that his feet were badly frozen.

Revival of the Southern Trade, What Southerners Say.

The New York correspondent of the Philadelphia Ledger writes under date of the 12th instant.

Within the few days past, quite a large number of Southern men, from Alabama, Mississippi and Louisiana, have arrived in town, not to talk politics, but to purchase goods. They bring more money with them than our merchants have been anticipating anybody from that quarter could produce, and it has been freely invested in dry goods, groceries, hardware, drugs and medicines, and agricultural implements, mainly.

Notwithstanding the forbidding aspect of the political situation, such of these visitors as I have seen and conversed with, talk quite hopefully of the "look out" ahead. In those parts of the country where the freedmen are at work, they say things are going on as well as could be expected, and in localities where they are doing nothing, the white men themselves are taking off their coats and going to work, as we do here in the North. Planting corn, potatoes, and raising hogs, rather than cotton, is considered the wisest policy on all hands, at least for the present. The corn and potatoes and the hogs will not bring them in much money, they say, but they will keep famine from the door, and that, at present, is all they can expect.

THE FAMINE IN PRUSSIA.—The German papers are filled with heart-rending details of the famine which now prevails in Eastern Prussia, in consequence of the failure of three successive crops. A number of places typhus fever has broken out, and the amount of misery there, with, among thousands of people, baffles all description. The Prussian government and local committees are making the utmost efforts to afford as much relief as possible to the sufferers.

Reconstructing.

Col. S. E. Goodson has sold his farm, one mile north of this place, to Dr. Huffman, of Pennsylvania, for $18 50 per acre in gold. A good price considering the times.

DR. HUFFMAN has further bringing with him 400 blooded sheep.—He is a scientific farmer, and an experienced stock raiser, and is a good owner. We have room enough for a few more of the same sort.—Let them come.—Bristol (Va.) News.
