A Tennessee Mystery---Three Disguised Men Kidnap and Murder a Physician.

The Nashville Banner, of June 4th, has the following account of latest phase of ruffianism in Tennessee: "One of the most startling occurrences which has for some time come cut. to our knowledge was the spiriting away last Monday night of Dr. Mc-Adams, formerly of Lewisburg, but recently residing at Chapel Hill, Marshall county. On the evening of last Monday a young man named Dr. McAdams, with seven others, members of an amateur string band, met at Miller's store, Chapel Hill, N. C. HAMS, for the purpose of practice. The door of the store being closed, the young men prepared for their eve ning's entertainment. But soon after they had tuned their instruments there came a knock at the door. Dr. McAdams kept playing a banjo while a companion opened-the door. A man dressed in red and whitespotted clothing, and wearing a mask, made his appearance, followed by another, who carried a long rope, and by a third holding his hands at his side, while three others remained outside the door. The first, without uttering a Wood and Willow Ware, arm and quietly pulled him off the counter, while another of the band WILMINGTON, N. C. threw him violently to the floor. OFFER TO THEIR CUSTOMERS THE His hands and feet were then tied Kept constantly on hand and guaranteed to give setisfaction to the standard feet were then tied of the standard feet were the standard feet were then tied of the standard feet were then tied of the standard feet were the standard fe with the rope. At this unlooked-for give satisfaction to the most fastidious. outrage upon his person and liberty Dr. McAdams said: 'I know you, like a soldier.' "The leader, endeavoring to disguise his voice, responded: 'We 125 bbls. and 75 boxes LEMON, SUGAR and will show you how to treat trait-

every one of you; but I want to die out of the house, to the great consternation of his companions. So conveyed their burden in the yard, they were joined by the other three, and went down the road toward bound in cloth. Duck river. They had not proceeded a great distance before they met Mr. John Robertson, who was riding a horse. In a disguised voice Robertson, calling the latter by name, 'We want your horse.' What HAVING PURCHASED THE STOCK do you want with it?' Mr. Robertson asked. 'We want your horse to put this man on. You will find him in the morning three and a half niles distant from here near the Long String bridge.' "Mr. Robertson: "Gentlemen, -I don't know you, and I would not willingly lend my horse to persons who are entire strangers to me. Being Published in one of take my horse I cannot help it; you take my horse I cannot have him with my consent."

I would respectfully recommend him to my former patrons.

June 1st, 1868. bridge, over Duck river, on the Nolensville pike. After the meeting with Mr. Robertson, nothing more was heard of the party that night. Commission Merchant, About daylight on Tuesday many citizens, who had already heard of the outrage, started out in the hope No. 10 So. Front St., -- Up Stairs, of finding McAdams. Near the centre of the bridge was found heaped up a quantity of hair, identified as having belonged to Dr. McAdams. It had the appearance of having been shaved from his Wilmington Carriage and

"The search proved vain. It is supposed that, after suffering many indignities from his tormentors, he was thrown into the river and drowned. The citizens living near by strongly believed that this was the case; and determined to drag the the case; and determined to drag the river hoping to recover his body. Whether they succeeded we have not yet heard. It is asserted that Dr. McAdams was a member of the band that carried him away, and that they meant by using the word traitor' that he had in some way betrayed them a week before by getting drunk and riding into town in full uniform. "Dr. McAdams is represented as an excellent citizen. His wife and three children reside in Lewisburg."
