OHIO.

The Radicals are in a good deal of trouble in regard to Ohio. Parties were so evenly divided in the Senate of that State that two Republicans, elected as "Reformers" by Democratic votes in Hamilton county, held the balance of power. One of the Radical Senators died a tew days ago, and the Senate now stands as follows:

Regular Democrats, Regular Republicans, Hamilton County Reformers, 2

In the meantime, Grant has removed "Impeacher" Ashley from the office of Governor of Montana Territory and appointed Gen. Potts, one of the Radical Senators of Ohio, in his place. The Radicals have protested against taking Gen. Potts out of the Legislature, and it is now given out that his nomination will not be confirmed until his services can be dispensed with in Ohio. An election to fill the vaancy caused by Mr. Russel's death has been ordered, to take place December 30, in order that the new senator may be ready to participate in the organization of the Legislature, which meets the first Monday in January.

INDIA COTTON.

The recent report of the "Cotton Commissioner for the Central Proinces of India and the Berars." states that the "rebellion" in America caused a material increase in the production of cotton in the regions named, and that the number of acres under cultivation in 1867-8 was as follows: In the central provinces, 552,520 acres, and in the Berars, 1,254,552, making an area of 1,807,072 acres, or 28231 square miles. Bombay, it is stated, ex ports every year one million bales of cotton, of which one-fourth comes from the provinces mentioned. The central provinces of India forming that portion called the Deccan, lie between the 16th and 23rd degrees of north latitude, and extend from the river Kisinah on the south to the Nerbuddah on the north. They are traversed by numerous rivers and small streams, and having a rich alluvial soil are very tertile. Only a small portion of this tract has yet been devoted to the cultivation of cotton.

NEW ENGLAND SLAVERY.

The factory girls in several parts of New England are dissatisfied with the treatment they are receiving from their employers. In Dover, N. H., about six hundred meeting of female operatives in Lowell has sent messages of sympathy and support. According to the complaint of the chief speaker (Miss Collins) in old times the girls were treated like human beings, "but lately the cotton kings had become more avaricious, and in their wild rush for wealth had forgotten all honor and forsaken every feeling of humanity." She went on to say that the factory girls were worse off than the black women of the South.

General Frederico Cavada; the eral Adolph Cavada; and the third, petrified giant. compased of 9000 men, under the joint command or Generals Jordan and Castello. The revolutionists have thus far succeeded in liberating 145,000 slaves, in capturing 1926 Spanish prisoners, 6322 stand of arms, and 29 field pieces, besides burning a large number of sugar mills and growing crops of sugar cane. They were furnished with the ordithe rudest hand. The American haymaking machine, with its fine frame work of stout hickory, and small saddle-shaped driver's seat of plated iron, is recommended to the attention of English workmen who replied they were going to Chathan, the next station north of Auburn. The British manufacturers are fully aware of this defect of too great solidity, and endeavor to conceal the ponderous timbers under a graining of maple and other fancy woods.

A Free Fight Between Passengers. Conductor and Brakemen.

From a passenger who arrived here from the South on the Obicago and St. Louis Railroad train, due here at twentyfive minutes past nine o'clock last night, we learn the particulars of one of the most brutal and shameless outrages we have ever been called on to chronicle.

At some point below Auburn five drunken Inshmen got on the train and paid their fare to that point, after some hesitanary checks for way passengers, each check bearing a number signifying the station to which they had paid. After the train left Auburn the conductor (Clark) went through the train, and seeing the men still seated in the smoking car told them they had passed their station. They said they had paid to Auburn only, and must pay an additional fare if they wished to go further. They insisted they had paid to Chatham, but on being shown the tickets, which plainly proved they had paid to Auburn only, they assailed the conductor with the most brutal imprecations, and declared they would ride to Chatham or anywhere they pleased, with or without fare. Upon this Mr. Clark left them and went to collect the remainder of his fares before entering into any further controversy.

But this apparently peaceful triumph only enraged the ruffians, and shortly after Mr. Clark left the car they followed him for the purpose, as they declared, of beating him. The leader of the gang found his way to the ladies' car, which he attempted to enter. He was met by a brakeman, who opposed his entrance and who he, at one blow, knocked senseless. By this time the passengers were thoroughly aroused to the position. The train was proceeding at full speed, and among peaceful passengers were five ruffians, whose ordinary brutality was increased by whiskey, and by the peaceful demeanor of the conductor. The gentlemen, therefore, in the ladies' car sprang upon the intruder. The first who approached him was knocked down and the conductor then assaulted and received a stunning blow. Another passenger then struck a heavy blow, which fortunately prostrated the brute, who was then beaten

The passengers seeing their assailant helpless, then turned their attention to the other cars, where an active battle was going on between the other four rioters and the passengers. In a moment or two the brakeman who had been first knocked down approached the leader of the gang, who was still in the ladies' car, and struck him some fearful blows; the passenger also who had been struck seized the poker and gave the villain some crushing blows. By this time the train had stopped at Chatham and the other passengers in the ladies' car, to save the life of the worthless brute who was again senseless, took him up and put him out of the car. They had hardly done so when a shower of stones and billets of wood came flying through the car windows, smashing the glass and injuring several passengers, among others two ladies and one or more children. It seems that the passengers in the forward cars had driven the rioters off the train, and that they were taking this method of revenge. The ladies and children were hastily stowed in the safest places in the car, while the men prepared to repulse this new attack. They had hardly done so when the leader of the gang, having partially recovered from his former punishment, came into the car and began hurling the billets of stove wood at its occupants. The passengers at once assailed him, and in a short time disabled him. They held him for a short time while search was made for a pistol or knife with which to kill him, but none could be found on the train, so he was thrown off the platform. As the train moved off he arose from the ground and attempted to get on again, but one of the men employed on the train struck him a disabling blow with a heavy bottle, which A. D. BROWN'S. stretched him senseless and bleeding on the ground. While this last encounter was in progress the passengers and train hands drove off the rio'ers, who were assailing the ladies' car from the outside, so that with the defeat of the leader the affair was over. Our informant states that the battle lasted while the train was standing at Chatham some twenty minutes. We are not informed of the extent of the injuries received by the passengers. One man received a severe face wound, others were more or less bruised, and as we mention above, several ladies and children were hurt. On the whole it is as brutal and causeless an affray as we have ever beard of, and in view of the possible repetition of such outrages the officers of the company should provide the train men arms suitable to repel such attacks and protect peaceful pas-
