GERMAN SUPREMACY

That grim old warrior and devoted German, Von Moltke, is accredited with the remark that "Europe would never enjoy permanent repose, and immunity from threats of war, until the time shall come when the continent can be unshackled for battle without Germany's permission."

This aspiration of the German mind for German supremacy in Europe is based upon a serious conviction of necessity and right, as well as upon a considerable national pride. The patriotism of the Germans is a very remarkable characteristic of that people, and this we can concede without in any manner signifying approval of the present policy of the dominant German power.

Concerning the present ambition of the Germans, the New York Express cites as the only parallel in history to the aims of King William, the ambition of William of Orange, who as Metcalfe says, considered the French monarchy as to himself what the Roman Republic was to Hannibal, the Ottoman power to Scanderberg, and the Southern domination to Wallace.

The News says: Information has been received here that the steam King Samson, on her passage from this city to Mobile, has been lost near Indian River, Florida.

Mr. Jesse Savage, well known some few years back as one of the proprietors of the Merchants Hotel, corner of King and Society streets, in Charleston, was brutally murdered in New Haven, Conn., on the 20th ult.

The Charleston News of Tuesday says: The sharp advance in cotton put a brighter face upon things generally in the city yesterday, and the prevailing hope that we are upon the crest of the piping times of peace, infused a buoyant feeling throughout the community.

The Columbia Phoenix says: Two companies of the 18th Infantry, under command of Major Stewart, proceeded to Newberry Court House, on the 23d, to take post at that place, in order to act with the civil authorities in preserving the public peace.

The minor-pure Africans of Georgia complain that when one of the colored brethren is selected for office he has more white than black blood in his veins, which isn't fair towards the genuine negro. The wire-pullers give an excuse that the white radicals won't vote for the simon-pure negro, and hence the uniform resort to the mixed article when it is used at all.

If you must nominate colored men for Congress, take them so light that you can't distinguish them from a dark-skinned white man when the blinds are closed and the curtains drawn! For party's sake don't send any regular blacks here. We cannot abide them. They like to talk about "no distinction on account of color"—but it is all gas.

This is the story, in brief, of the grand mulatto Congressional race in Georgia in 1870. So far from being a concession to the negroes, these nominations, rightly considered, are a sign of the negro's account of his color.

This officious self-constituted diplomat and peace-maker has been around the globe in Europe, and has snubbed everybody for his pains. In turn, he has been snubbed in his own affairs, and isn't authorized to speak for anybody else than Burnside.

Burnside's chief distinction during the war was getting the army driven out of Frederickburg, Va., and suppressing the Chicago Times. The French have enough bad generals of their own. Burnside's generalship isn't the sort Bismarck is accustomed to, and as nobody wants the distinguished American as a peace-maker, it's employment can't be found for him in suppressing newspapers. It would be advisable to send Burnside back to Rhode Island.

Chicago will long, it would appear, keep the lead in the production of ultra wickedness and upon open depravity. She has brought up Jas. Shepard, the youth is but 19 years old. He has been sentenced to stay in the Reform School, but will not consent to serve his sentence out. He has escaped from the institution 12 times, and the last time he managed to secure his liberation in a manner that nobody can discover.

Grant has returned from Maryland, where he has been playing marbles with a loved little play-mate. He has not yet decided whether to make baseball, marbles or horse-racing the national pastime, but will shortly issue his preliminary regulations in favor of the three. The Mobile Register is our authority.

One of our exchanges says: "Among the novelties to be exhibited at the fair at Sacramento City is a slab of petrified bacon. It was found in 1865, near one of the great volcanoes, and is believed to have been a part of the provender of the party."

An impeccable and ingenious New England widow contributed the last dollar she had in the world to a home for indigent females and then entered herself as an inmate for life.

The Courier says: One company of the 18th regiment arrived in the city on Saturday, and another left for Laurens.

General Terry, commanding Department of the South, passed through Columbia Tuesday, en route to Washington, D. C.

Charleston opens her grand Institute Fair this day week. The State Agricultural Society's Fair will be held on November 10.

arm between the elbow and wrist, as if it had been done by machinery. Near the shoulder there were thirteen holes, made by a bullet from the gun. Ever shot out clear through. Amputation was decided to be necessary, and the patient submitted to the operation calmly. He lingered until nearly 9 o'clock when, surrounded by his mother and three children, he breathed his last.

The highest head, the noblest and bravest character of our country, the most conscientious, humane, and faithful soldier, the most shrewd and gentleman in this world, the best, the most superb sample of the American warrior, has fallen like a mighty tree in the forest; and men wonder after the first shock of the news to find that there is such a gap, such a blank, in the world.

What is there wanting to the fame of this illustrious American?—Irish Citizen.
