

THE CIRCULATION OF THE MORNING STAR IS LARGER THAN THAT OF ANY OTHER DAILY NEWSPAPER PUBLISHED IN NORTH CAROLINA.

WHERE THE WIND BLOWS -

Those who have persistently cherished faith in the ultimate uprising of the Northern people in vindication of civil liberty, are greatly comforted by recent occurrences. Military usurpation has of late manacled the liberties and franchises of those Northern brethren of ours, who employed it so ruthlessly for the destruction of Southern liberties. In brief, the scene here is an entirely different one from what it was some months ago. The Southern people are now in a position to be able to defend themselves against the aggression of the Government of Pennsylvania, and the Democratic Governor, Hoffman, of New York, is complaining against the aggression of the Government of Pennsylvania, and the Democratic Governor, Hoffman, of New York, is complaining against the aggression of the Government of Pennsylvania.

Verily Mayor Martin's signal triumph is again commemorated at the outbreak of the rebellion. The Baltimore American lately received a long communication, altogether of private letters, with the following modest request: 'Write a strong editorial for our paper, and send it to the United States Senator and member of Congress from your district.'

Our Western exchanges generally speak of trade as unusually stagnant, just now, but are hopeful of brisker times soon to come. At Cincinnati, Chicago, Louisville, and other centres of business, money is scarce and dear. It is admitted, however, that the money market is making money but few are willing to venture. The country is in distress, and the old motto 'slow but sure' is coming to be better thought of than it used to be.

We have had a great deal of this sort of thing to contend with, and we have murdered our own people. The North, now so indignant, had little charity or sympathy for us. Military power was an admirable instrument with which to crush down Southern Rights. Great armies were first used to make us vote and hold elections, and small armies were used to make us hold elections and give the sort of votes that the Federal Government desired.

The Chinese labor question seems to be rapidly finding its own solution. The labor demand is not now great anywhere, and the Chinese are being sent back to their own country. The Columbia Phoenix says: 'The Comptroller's report is published, and it shows that the State has a deficit of $1,000,000. The Pee Dee River at Cheraw was frozen over on Sunday morning, the 25th ult., the first time for several years. In Greenville, on Christmas day, the thermometer fell to 1 degree above zero. Nothing like this has been known since February 8, 1858, when the thermometer sank to 22 degrees below zero.'

The Charleston News of Monday says: 'The continued ringing of a bell on State street, near the corner of the old market, last evening, attracted much attention, and soon collected a large crowd of people. It was found to be a young white child, aged about three years, whose family resided in that neighborhood, had disappeared and was found during the afternoon. Up to a late hour the little wanderer had not been heard from, and great fears were entertained that another sort of disappearance had taken place.'

THE VICTORY CELEBRATED.

The publication placed by the Radical masses of Wilmington upon the victory achieved on Monday last by the most respectable means, amply attested by the riotous demonstrations of Monday night. Lawlessness was never to be desired in appreciation of its sweeping success over the virtue and decency of the community.

The Barrwell Sentinel says: 'Everything passed off quietly on a quiet day, but at night a colored man was severely wounded by a pistol ball, fired by a white man while under the influence of liquor, and who is regarded at such times as a dangerous character, and shunned by all who know him. The wounded man is doing well, but the assailant has been imprisoned.'

The Greenville Enterprise says: 'A difficulty occurred on Friday evening last, 8th ult., at or near Saluda Bridge, twenty miles above, in this County, on the place of a man named Hawkins, both colored, in which the former received his death, at the hands of the latter, from a pistol, the ball entering the lower abdomen.'

King William to his Soldi-rs. The following is the full extent of the order issued by King William to his army on the 6th of December: 'Soldiers of the Allied German Armies: We have again arrived at an epoch in the war. When I last addressed you the last of the French armies which were opposed to us at the commencement of the campaign had been destroyed, by the capitulation of Metz. Since then the enemy, by making extraordinary exertions, had managed to collect a few bodies of troops, and a great part of the inhabitants of France have abandoned their peaceful vocations, which we did not disturb, to take up arms. The enemy often outnumbered us, yet you have again defeated him; for bravery, discipline, and a just cause are of more value than a superiority of numbers. All the endeavors of the enemy to break through the investment lines of Paris have been decidedly repulsed, sometimes, it is true, as at Champanne, and Le Bourget, with severe sacrifices, but with the heroism you always display. The hostile armies which approached on every side to raise the siege of Paris have all been beaten. Our troops, part of which only a few weeks ago lay before Metz and Strasbourg, have now advanced beyond Rouen, Orleans and Dijon, and besides many small but victorious engagements, two great victories: Amiens and the battle before Orlans, which latter several days are added to our former achievements. Several fortresses and a great deal of war-material have been taken. I have therefore occasion only for the greatest satisfaction, which I feel a pleasure in expressing to you. I thank you all, from the general to the common soldier. Should the enemy insist on continuing the war, I know you will continue to exert all your powers in the same way which has led to the great successes we have gained, until we succeed in concluding an honorable peace, worthy of the sacrifice of blood and life which we have made.'

A Herald Schoolmaster says: 'The school building in which she was teaching is provided with ventilating flues, connected with the rooms by registers. These registers are of cast iron, weighing about forty pounds each, and are let into the wall about thirteen feet from the floor. On Monday afternoon of last week, as two little boys were working at the blackboard, directly under the register, in Miss Cooper's room, the lady happened to cast her eye in the direction of the ceiling, and saw to her consternation the heavy iron register was on the very point of falling on the heads of the unconscious children. Taking in the situation at a glance she saw that the registers could not be removed in time to avoid the impending danger, but determined to save the lives at any sacrifice, she rushed to the spot, and extending her arms above the heads of the little boys, raised the whole weight of the falling iron, and, by the utmost exercise of her strength, diverted it from the line of descent to the floor, where it fell close by the side of the impatient children. There is not the least doubt that but for the heroic action of Miss Cooper, the lives of one or both of the boys would have been sacrificed. Miss Cooper received a severe cut in the hand, and for a day or two her arm was so debilitated by the concussion as to be entirely useless.'

An exchange says: 'Mr. A. W. Dimmock, a British Wall street merchant, of but twenty years of age, is the owner of three-fourths of the capital stock, (nominal value $400,000,000) of the Atlantic Mail Steamship Company. He is also owner of over $1,000,000 worth of real estate in New York. During the last two years he has built, on the Elizabeth, two property over thirty parcels of real estate, which, as soon as completed, he has sold to the young fellows like himself, and thus is bringing large profits on them, besides establishing a delightful colony there. Five years ago a penniless clerk, the son of a Nova Scotia clergyman, he entered New York, and in two years was able to find $1,000,000. He has recovered his loss, has honorably discharged the debt of his father, and he was legally released. He is very charitable, and has lately built and given to the Baptists of Elizabeth a large and handsome church. He is a man of ideas and enterprise, and his home is a resort for poets, artists and people of genius. At the same time he is a very kind and generous man, and is as generous in spirit as in appearance.'

Dr. Livingston, the famous African traveler, whose fate has long been obscured, is said by a cable telegram to have arrived at Zambouze, and was waiting a vessel bound to England. It is to be hoped the long and weary journey of the civilized world is interested in the great explorer, who was so long ago reported killed by savages.

DEFENSIVE MEDICATION.

Investigation is necessary for the protection of the human body against disease when healthy indolence are added, as an armor against the elements of health and life, by which, at this inclement season, it is surrounded. Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, an admirable tonic and regulating medicine for all seasons, is never more needed than in winter, when the torpid influence of a chilly atmosphere affects all the vital functions, and renders the body extremely susceptible. By taking this medicine, and the bowels with this unequalled vegetable specific, a physical condition is attained which seems to be proof against all varieties of temperature, and that is inflexible in winter. This medicinal preparation is a preparation which should never be neglected when danger is present, and it is a course of the Bitters at this season is particularly desirable, especially for the feeble and sickly. A remedy for indigestion, flatulency, nervousness and bowel complaint, is nothing comparable to this wholesome restorative. DR. TOTT'S LIVER PILLS. As a purgative medicine, stands unrivalled. Their effects are uniform, certain and safe. They are entirely vegetable, and do not cause those griping pains that most pills do. PAIN KILLER. A Cure for Diphtheria! All interested, please read the following extract from a letter from Mrs. Ellen B. Mason, wife of Rev. Francis Mason, Torrington, Vermont: 'My son has taken violently sick with diphtheria, cold chills, burning fever and sore throat. I counted one morning ten little vesicles in his throat, very white, and his tongue, toward the end, like a water melon, full of seeds; the remainder of the throat as white as a white cloth. So many children have died around here, I was afraid to call a physician, and thought I would try your Pain Killer. I got a gargle, with small dose inwardly. I did so, and lo! the child was better. I got the Pain Killer, and he raised them up, after covered with blood. He was taken on Sunday, Wednesday his throat was clear, and his tongue rapidly clearing off. I also used it as a liniment, with success, on his neck, for his neck. It seemed to me to be wonderful, and I can but wish it could be known to the many sick children in our land who are losing so many of their lives. I have found your Pain Killer one of the most valuable medicines ever used in Vermont. Once I was taken with a severe black croup; the pain was intolerable. I immediately applied the Pain Killer, for I never travel without it, and in half an hour I was free from the pain. Dr. Walker writes from Connecticut: 'Your Pain Killer cured the most severe Diphtheria or Sore Throat that I so remarkably prevailed in my family, and I have since used it in every instance when used in time. The child should make known to the world. This is the best medicine I have ever used for the cure of this disease as a gargle and lozenge, as well as a tonic and stimulant for the throat. In Halifax, where this disease prevailed for many months in its most virulent form, the use of James Watson's Pain Killer was invariably successful. It was used in every case, and when it was used, the child made no more pain, or was to be had, the use of so powerful a stimulant.'
